This is Andy the Ed's mum, Pat. So Mrs Hutch, what was Andy's worst habit? "He had to be first everywhere, first to the shops, first up the path, first to the car..." Yes, thanks mum. Who's next...

Ah, that'll be Andy Ounsted's mum. So, Mrs O, what was our Art Ed's worst habit? "He'd always fall off his bike. He had the balancing skills of a stork with a broken ankle..." Ah yes, who's that...

Gosh! James Leach's mum, Liz! Well, Mrs L, what was our Games Ed like as a boy? "He was always really grumpy first thing in the morning." Is that it? "Erm, yes, he was a sweetie!" Hmm...

Hi ho Mrs Barker, what was Linda the spog like? "She was a lovely baby. However," Yes! "She used to bite her little brother's toes under the table!" Right, now who's that...

Hiya Mrs Booth. Go on then, dish the dirt on Maryanne. "She'd never go to sleep, I had to sit there for hours. Lord knows how many editions of the Generation Game I missed!" Fine!

Another year, another 365 days. We've made quite a few new year resolutions here in the shed. Personally I've decided to brush up on my pulling-skills. You see, I got spotted in the street the other day by this very attractive young lady. However, instead of asking me for a good snog, she merely wanted to know how I could possibly like a band as crap as EMF. It wasn't a very pleasant experience I can tell you. Anyway, if any YS readers have got handy hints or tips for me, then drop me a line explaining where I'm going wrong! Right on with the magazine, oh and remember team: take nobody's word for anything! Cheers,

Andy

COMPLETE GAME

It's an exclusive! Yes, Your Sinclair brings you the game that launched a thousand other games quite a bit like it, and many more which were totally different.

The idea is so simple a chimp could grasp it (especially if it was one of those clever tea-drinking clothes-wearing ones). What you do is race round a circuit with three other cars. You've got to win by any means, fair or foul. Actually you can't really play foul because you can't collide with the other vehicles. If you do, you just slide through each other like ghosts. This may sound like a bit of a bummer, but it means that you don't have to worry about getting through small gaps and stuff.

The big thing with Supersprint is that it's sooo quick. You really rocket around the track, and if you haven't got the reflexes of a particularly alert cat you'll be sliding all over the shop, shouting at the top of your voice for everyone else to stop overtaking you. Seeing as very few people have the responses of clever cats, everybody bashes into everybody else.

Spanner alert! Drive over it to pick it up and you'll be rewarded with a bottle of champagne and a box of Milk Tray.

You can also let other human players have a go with Supersprint because there's a pretty spanky multi-player option. The more the merrier, as we so often say at YS.

Also, with about 12 circuits to race round, you shouldn't get bored with the scenery. Don't say we're not incredibly nice to you here in the Shed.

It looks pretty easy, but don't be fooled. This track is as difficult as climbing the north face of the Eiger using only a toothpick.

PLAYABLE DEMO

The mean streets have just got meaner. Why? Because you're back.

Well, not you exactly. But Billy, the character you're playing, is back. He's the king of beating people up and he's out to kick loads of people and get his girl.

These streets are pretty exotic and far-flung. Y'see, the levels in Double Dragon 3 take place in such places as Egypt, Japan and China. But that's the proper full game, this fully playable demo just includes the first level, set in the USA.

The main idea behind all this violence is that you've got to get your little mitts on the Rosetta Stone. This is a (real) lump of rock with loads of ancient writing on it. It took the best archaeologists in the world years to decipher it, only to find it was a recipe for old-style flapjacks.

You've got to find the stones and hand them over to Black Warrior gang. In return they'll give you Marion back. Y'see, that's what all this manly fighting is about – a cute girl.

You've got all the training you need to get stuck in with the baddies. For major damage you've got the old punch, kick, and that fave, the flying kick. If you think that's weedy you can go into a weapons shop at the start of the game. When you enter, all the violence outside ceases. It's a quiet sort of shop, like the kind you see in the Cotswolds selling ancient fly-tying equipment and run by an old couple who... (get on with it! Ed).

You've got a load of credits which you can spend on extra lives and extra fighting moves. You then move back into the fray.

A record shop! This is New York so maybe they'll have some really cheap CDs. I won't even have to pay for them if I look like this.

As you fight, it's best to keep moving into a clear area. If you get into the middle of a crowd, you'll get punched and kicked from all sides, and once you fall you'll have a devil of a job getting up.

The demo runs for much of the first level, and you should finish it if you keep your wits about you. It's certainly an appetizer for the full game, which we should be reviewing next issue.

COMPLETE GAME

Hmm, Space 7, eh? Sounds a bit like the Magnificent 7 or Blake's 7, you know, that rather sad show that used to be on at tea-time on Saturdays.

Do you remember the one where they dropped Orac (that crap square computer) and its top came off so you could tell it had been made out of Squeezy washing-up liquid bottles?

Anyway, Space 7 isn't anything to do with Blake's 7 or anything else with the number seven in it. It is, in fact, a game which sets you up as a small semi-plastic AV8 androidy sort of robot in a spooky 3D sideways-viewed land.

Exterminate! Exterminate! These daleks, eh? Can't trust them a bit.

You chug around this place looking for the special mega Space 7 Control Computer. And no, I'm not going to tell you what this looks like or where you can find it. You'll just have to take my word for it that when you come across it you'll certainly recognise it – it, erm, looks like a big control computer.

You move around by using O and P to aim yourself, then hitting Q to get some speed up. It's pretty easy and you should have no trouble if you keep your speed down. Going too fast is the only thing that can really muck you up. So remember, kids – speed kills.

Oh, and one other thing that can also kill you is the enemy. This is a bit of a downer cos there are loads of enemies and you've thus got a very high chance of being killed.

They patrol certain areas so you can dodge them if you're clever, but if they so much as graze you, you're dead meat, or plastic or whatever.

Pressing M transforms

Aren't those hearts sweet? In fact, the whole thing looks dead nice and not at all grim. But grim it certainly is.

you into the special high-speed mode, but to collect useful objects (such as explosives) you must be in normal android mode.

The rest of Space 7 you can find out for yourselves. You know the scenario, you know what you've got to do. Now go off and do it. Oh, and jolly good luck – the rest of the universe is counting on you.

But as he was psyching himself to do it, his mum found a pile of Custard Creams behind the sofa, where Jon had hidden them. # ROAD RUNNER AND WILE E COYOTE

Hi Tec

PLAYABLE
DEMO

This is one of those timeless and classic cartoons that you can wake up to watch on Saturday mornings (if it's still on) and you can guarantee that within 0.13 of a second you'll be laughing your bedsocks off.

So you'll be more than delighted to hear that you can play the game on a Speccy near you. Hi Tec, those wacky Sheffield-based, er, people have got the rights to many, if not all, of the Hanna-Barbera titles, so this one is just the tip of the iceberg.

What you must do is move the Road Runner left and right, avoiding the objects being dropped by Wile E Coyote as he jets his way past on an ACME rocket pod.

As well as keeping out of the way of the bombs, anvils

Free bird seed, eh? Let me at it, Mr Coyote! You'll have to jump over that worm first though. Good luck!

and other nasty bits and pieces he's dropping, you must steer clear of any creatures rushing around on the ground. Sound tough? It most certainly is.

And what makes it even tougher is that you have to collect certain objects as well. You see, the Road Runner needs food and stuff as well, and you've got to grab all the nosh you can find.

Some objects give him extra speed, some give him much higher jumps. You've got to survive for 80 seconds before you've beaten the level.

Road Runner And Wile E Coyote is for serious players only. It really requires some nifty gameplay from you!

PLAYABLE
DEMO

It's war! The year is 1943 (ish). The Germans are packed like sardines in Italy, it's getting towards the close of the Second World War, and you've either got to get the germies out of Italy using your Allied troops or, if you're playing the Germans, keep them there.

You move from unit to unit, scrolling around the map display with the N key (taking you to the next unit with no orders). All you need to do is press H to hold, M to move across country or R to move along a road.

To enter into combat, simply wait for your movement phase then select each of your units in turn (here's where the N key comes in so useful). Move them using either M or R, right up next to an enemy, then choose where you want them to end up using the cursor keys and RETURN.

of supply. It makes a lot of difference to the way they fight. If they're really knackered and you send them in to fight anyway, they'll put up a bit of aggro then disappear in the opposite direction. Serves you right for trying to get them to do too much.

If you can wipe out all the enemy on the map, you've won. However, there are only a limited number of turns allowed. Kill the enemy in this time and you're doing extremely well indeed.

Time for a bit of space combat, methinks. Pay attention cos it's going to need some hefty explaining.

Y'see, the baddies have invaded the moon and they're heading towards your base (marked F on the map). Oo-er! You've got to destroy their forces, both on the ground and in the sky.

To help you, there are three main combat modes. There's missile mode, where the gunsight is square and above the horizon; laser mode, where the gunsight is below the horizon and octagonal. Finally there's navigation mode, where the gunsight is one the hull and diamond in shape.

Big city, bright lights! And up above the little spaceships do whatever it is that spaceships do.

Missile mode is used to destroy enemy fighters beyond visual range.

You simply align the gunsight, fire and forget. Laser mode is used to attack all visual enemies. Nav mode allows you to follow your computer's preset course.

Watch your fuel and temperature, if they look dodgy, return to base (using Nav mode). If they're okay, fly around blowing everybody to pieces. And that's it.

BARRIER...

It is not by chance that Konix has become one of Europe's leading joystick manufacturers. Nor is it surprising that our products are taking the U.S. market by storm. All this is simply the result of our total dedication to customer satisfaction, through innovation and quality.

The same principles of novel design and rugged construction, so successfully established with the SpeedKing range, have been uncompromisingly applied to the more recently introduced Konix Navigator.

Thanks to its outstanding ergonomic styling, the Navigator is a perfect fit for every hand. With its natural trigger finger action, the Navigator truly achieves the ultimate in fatigue-free super-fast precision performance.

Just like the SpeedKing, the formidable power of the Navigator can be used with the most popular types of home computer, including all Atari/Atari ST models, Commodore 64, 128, VIC20 and Amiga, MSX computers, Amstrad CPC computers as well as Spectrum Plus/Plus 2 and Plus 3.

DAILY SPECTRUM

THE FAB FIVE HIT TOWN

A special report from Arabella Ponsonby-ffoulkes-Hall.

The nation rejoices as the country's favourites get a bit of right royal recognition. Yep, the Queen Mother is the YS team's biggest fan. According to our Royal correspondent, Jeremy Forcecorn-Smythe, the good old Queen Mum likes nothing better than a good larf. She has often been spotted in a tatty but comfortable chair with a packet of shortbread and a copy of Your Sinclair. "It keeps her occupied for hours," says Jeremy, a 32 year old royal carpet cleaner.

Buxom Red-head

A Royal insider informed us that the Queen always looks to her mother for inspiration when she's compiling her New Years Honours List. "She hates doing it," said our buxom red haired source who must remain nameless. The Queen Mum persuaded Elizabeth Jnr that the YS team were the nation's faves and she'd be dead popular with the kids if she gave them an award of some sort. Young Liz wasn't so sure, but her mum gave her a copy of YS to take away and read. An hour later the Queen was convinced that it was the right thing to do.

Bacon And Eggs

Today, the Fab Five went to the Palace to pick up their MBEs for

It's the Fab Five! They look smart now, but in a few years time they'll all have long hair, furry kaftans and bottles of patchouli oil in every pocket. How the mighty are fallen!

services rendered. Not since the Beatles received their honours have such bright young things been honoured in this manner. Royal housemaid, Claire Green, said that the Palace hasn't seen such hectic activity since Prince Andrew brought loads of his champagne-swigging buddies back for some bacon and eggs back in June 1985.

Mr Sheen

We collared the team as they left Buck House and asked them just who exactly they thought they were.

Excuse me, YS team, but who exactly do you think you are?
Erm, Members of the British Empire, actually.
Okay, smarty-pants - what's the Queen's fave game?
Well she likes games with a bit of royalty in them. Dizzy, Prince Of The Yolk Folk was on her Speccy when we were there and she's already placed an order with Hamleys for a copy of Mega Twins.

Did she give you any tea?
Yeah, Earl Grey it was. Linda refused to drink it and James spat his all over the Axminster carpet. It was a tad embarrassing. Then Maryanne needed the loo so everybody decided that they had to go to the loo too. Except Linda. We all traipsed off through miles of corridors hung with tapestries and smelling of old books and Mr Sheen. When we got back, about an hour later, Linda was telling the Queen all about the last Heavenly gig she went to. Poor Queenie.

Did you meet the Queen Mum?

Yep, she came in for a quick cuppa. She sat on James' lap and asked him if he had any good tips for the 2.15 at Newmarket. He told her to make sure she got rid of all the baddies before attempting to get into the lift on Level Two. I think it's safe to say that a good time was had by all. What are you going to do now? Conquer the world. Probably.

AT THE BUS-STOP WITH... Harry Cross

BUS STOP

Harry Cross - the grumpy old codge with a heart. But what we want to know is - what does he spend his money on?

YS: But is it grim?

Harry: Too blimmin' right. You soft lads know now't, livin' in your nice little bungalows with your nice little cheese plants. People like you make me sick. It's people like you who are responsible for the state of the world today.

YS: Actually, that's simply not true.

Harry: Akshully, I think you'll find it is. Look at you - do you work in t' factory? No, you blimmin' well don't. So there.

YS: Ah, here's our bus. So nice to have met you, Mr Cross. We must do it again sometime. Ta ta you old fart, you.

Just the other day the YS team left the shed to get the bus home when who should they meet but Harry Cross out of Brookside. Quite frankly, they were shocked. What was Harry Cross doing at a bus-stop just a hundred yards from the Shed and, more importantly, why hadn't he popped in for a quick cuppa?

The team thought was a good chance to set the record straight on a number of issues.

YS: Tell us, Harry, you must be rolling in it what with all those TV appearances. You can obviously afford some pretty decent clobber, so why do you wear such appalling clothes?

Harry: Eh, I don't think that's any of your business. I can wear what I blimmin' well want, you young whippersnappers.

YS: Of course, Harry. Now, you're a chunky Northerner, is it really grim oop north?

Harry: Eh bay goom, when I were a lad it were reet grim. Nowadays there's Probe Records in Penny Lane and a few of those so-called pop groups, the young people seem to be having a good time. But, they know now't. All we had when I was young were George Formby and Gracie Fields. And God of course. Nowadays all the young 'uns are into The Farm. Load of crap, if you ask me.

Eh, it's our Gracie. She were a grand lass, and she never forgot where she came from.

TZERS

* The Codies are bouncing into '92 with a, erm, very large bounce. To prove they're 100% behind the Specy, those cheeky chaps a) have said that it's their favourite machine and b) are planning loads more Seymour releases.

First up should be Seymour Takes The Wild West. This will be an arcade adventure (what else?) in which Seymour bravely takes the Wild West but is forced to give it back later by his mum.

A new CJ the Elephant game will be out in the next few weeks as well. This will be another, um, arcade adventure.

Dizzy, that eggy favourite of many a Spectrum user won't be starring again until the Autumn by which time Europe will be united and Dizzy will have to be called L'oeuf qui marché or das Ei mit Hände or something.

Big Nose, a prehistoric caveman who's nothing to do with Little Nose who used to be on Blue Peter, is already famous on the Nintendo. His first game is reviewed in this issue. You'll be seeing more of him in 1992 along with Steg the slug. Yep, the Codies are on a roll.

* Brummie biggies US Gold are finally getting round to releasing Indiana Jones And The Fate Of Atlantis. We featured this in YS months ago, but it's only just about ready to be released now. Why? Well who knows why the software houses do things. It's a mystery.

* Thalamus, the software arm of Newsfield, are up and running once more. On the cards are the cute platformer Creatures (a huge hit on the Commodore 64) and Armalyte, a blaster of, er, blasting proportions. These have been delayed a fair bit, but we'll get them as soon as possible. Oh and while we're on the subject, why don't they show The Dukes Of Hazzard on telly anymore?

KARTOON KORNER KOMPO

If you're a cartoon fan, you'll probably be aware that Hi Tec have got the rather posh Hanna Barbera licence.

They've been churning out Specy versions of classics like Hong Kong Phooey, Ruff 'n' Reddy (whoever they are) and Top Cat.

And guess what? These are all available in one compilation. We've got ten copies of the Hanna Barbera Cartoon Collection to simply give away. And you (yes you!) can win one!

All you need to do is answer these three penetrating questions.

- What is the name of Yogi Bear's little sidekick?
- Which country does Hong Kong Phooey live in?
- What's the worst cartoon ever?

When you've decided on your answers, send 'em on a postcard (or stuck-down envelope) to us by 15th March. Address the cards to the "We hate Rocky And Bullwinkle", Compo, Your Sinclair, 29 Monmouth St Bath BA1 2BW.

Oh, and make sure we get them by the 15th of March, 1992.

For just a quid you could get a Predator poster and a badge! What a barg, eh? Inside there was a very rude cartoon by Duncan MacDonald, a picture of David Vine, loads of games reviews, an article on role-playing games and a Megapreview of Ocean's latest shoot-'em-up - Platoon.

And that was about it really. Pssst did not as yet exist so there were no incredibly funny pictures, all the jokes on the Letters' pages were crap and we presume that Star Trekkin' by The Firm was a hit. Why? Cos of headlines like 'It's Worse Than That. He's Lead, Jim!' It was all completely ridiculous and utterly superb.

US Gold/£10.99 cass £15.99 disk

JAMES I phoned up Yellow Pages yesterday, and they told me that G-LOC stands for G-force, Loss Of Consciousness. Fine. But what does all this nonsense actually mean? Well settle down at the back and I'll happily tell you.

Achtung! Enemy swine ahead! Give him a taste of British steel, Carruthers! Wait until you see the whites of his foreign little eyes!

Modern fighter planes whizz around at such speeds that every time they go round even the smallest of corners, the blood rushes away from the pilot's head and to his feet. It might sound a lot of fun, but actually it doesn't do the pilot any good. Without blood, his brain goes a bit wonky and his eyes cease to work. He is then what we doctors call unconscious.

Flying a plane whilst you're unconscious is something only the foolhardy try, so in the air force, the pilots are taught to scream at the top of their voices when they start to black out. Screaming forces blood back into their heads and they don't pass out. It also frightens anyone in the vicinity to death. Clever, eh?

Now you can try it at home, kids. G-LOC has hit the Speccy, and hit it real hard. Taken from the rather amazing arcade game, it puts you in an F14 Tomcat (actually, in the blurb you get given at the beginning of the game, they don't call this plane an F14 Tomcat, but I know me aircraft, and I can tell you that it most certainly is an F14 Tomcat and let that be an end to the subject.) Anyway, this, er, plane you're flying is actually from an aircraft carrier somewhere in the Bermuda Triangle (or the Pacific or somewhere). The idea is simple. You take off, fly around and destroy everything else in the sky, whilst trying to avoid the loss of consciousness bit.

There's bogies all over me!

Stop sniggering, cos bogies are what we fighter types call the enemy. As you chug along in your F14, your radar scope fills up with nasty little dots. These are bogies, so you've got to swing from left to right, blasting away with all weapons. More exciting than a trip to the Bourneville Factory!

You've got two sorts of weapons. Hold the fire button down for constant machine-guns, or press it quickly to release homing missiles. These are the best way of taking out enemies - but you only have a limited number and you need a red-lock on your scope before you're assured of a direct hit.

The battle is arranged into 36 waves. In the first wave you must destroy eight aircraft, then you must get ten, then 12 until you get to a ground attack phase which has oil-rigs and stuff to trash.

What a shot! They don't call me rooty-tooty-accurate-shooty James for nothing, you know. I've got six of the ten planes I need this level.

Although the game is in full 3D, with scrolling ground features and pretty accurate movement, it's not a flight sim as such. There's no taking off and landing; and you can't turn around, climb or dive. You can do a lot of moving around though, which means you can aim your plane at the other fighters buzzing across your display in all directions.

Flight of the loonies

G-LOC is impressively fast, I must just say that. You get treated to a most pleasant view of your plane flying around, then you get dumped into the flying seat. Before you get a chance to take a deep breath, you're plunged right into the thick of the action. Planes come up from behind, they come from the front, the sides and er, every direction you can think of, with the possible exception of inside. You'll be overwhelmed. It reminded me a bit of that scene from Star Wars where you see about 60 fighters on screen all at once, blasting in all directions. (Well it did remind me of that!).

Luckily the screen update rate is fast enough to cope with this and make it pretty smooth as well. You can have about ten enemies on screen at any one time, which calls for salvoes of missiles and your little fingers holding down the machine-guns as well. Phew, you'll say as you just about manage to get your quota of planes before your plane explodes and you see it from a nifty outside view as it tumbles into the sea. Sadly for you and your next of kin, it's impossible to eject from your knackered plane as it hurtles towards the cold, hard ground. Your only hope is to try and land your stricken plane on a bed factory. It's a slim chance, but you might make it because the part of the Pacc Ocean you're flying over has got loads of floating bed-factories sailing around.

Sound is a bit rudimentary. Clicking and hissing sounds for the machine-guns and the odd explosion are about all you can really expect. It doesn't matter - the graphics more than make up for it.

Break hard right and stay on his tail. Then wait for a red-lock and fire. What could be simpler? (apart from sitting around and watching the telly).

FIVE TOP GUN FACTS

- In order to train for the film, Tom Cruise actually had to fly a real F14. He nearly crashed it though and got a real telling off from the US Navy.
- Tommy actually suffered G-LOC during filming. He had to lie down in his tent for two days afterwards, saying he felt 'a bit tired'. What a big girl.
- An F14 costs as much as the entire London Underground System.
- But goes a great deal faster.
- Er, and uses more petrol.

JOYSTICK JUGGLERS

Mums, eh? Aren't they ace? Well, they are when they cook you nice meals and wash your clothes but not when all they can talk about is how you once vommed all over the vicar. We asked the jugglers to save us a journey and tell us exactly what they did when they were young.

Andy Hutchinson So what would your mother tell us if she was here now, Andy? "Probably that she couldn't let me out of her sight for a minute in case I jumped out of the window. Y'see, up 'til I was about sixteen, I used to do it all the time. There was a hedge under my window and I worked out how to escape from my cot at a very early age" So what do you think this says about you? "Well, that I'm a bit of a rad and dangerous dude." Of course.

we thought we'd just ask her. Jon as a baby, eh? Tell us about it, mum. "Oh, he was a lovely baby. So round and pink, just like a little jelly. I remember taking him to the vicar's house for tea and he stuffed his little face full of French Fancies. Then the vicar picked him up and bounced little Jonty up and down on his knee for a bit. Oh, I was mortified." Why? "Well, all that bouncing up and down bounced those French Fancies right out of his little tum and into the vicar's lap." Ha! Ha!

James Leach How would your mum embarrass you, James? "My mum really can't remember much about me as a baby, so she'd probably just tell you that I ate beetles." What, real ones? "Of course. My favourite sort were ladybirds, they're a bit like M&Ms in that they've got a soft centre and a crisp shell. So they melt in your mouth, not in your hand." And how has this affected you in later life? "Erm, I quite like M&Ms." Fair enough.

Rich Pelley According to Rich, his entire life has been spent chasing babes. Unconvinced, we rang his mum to see if our resident Romeo was being completely honest. So what's all this about the infant Rich and the girlies, Mrs Pelley? "Ha! Ha! He was terrified of them. Whenever they played kiss chase at school he'd come home crying his little eyes out cos some nasty girl had managed to catch him. Still, he seems to have got over it now." You can say that again.

Linda Barker And what horrible tales would your mum have to tell, little Linda? "None. I was a disgustingly good baby who spent ages laughing at the sunshine. I was dead sweet, me. I had a really groovy anorak and these ace heart-shaped sunglasses and..." Oh dear.

Dave Golder Dave was a bit of a sleepy baby. "Once we were coming back from our hols and we landed at Gatwick. I was so tired that I just kipped down in the nearest available comfy seat and shut my eyes. The next thing I knew, I was surrounded by strangers asking me who I was and where I came from. I'd climbed into the nearest car and ended up in a small hamlet near Plymouth." You got home alright though, didn't you? "I think so, when I next woke up I was in bed."

Jon Pillar We called up Jon to ask him about his youth, but we got his mum instead. So

HIGH SCORES

- 90° - 100° The Queen hasn't come up with an award good enough for this game. It's better than an MBE and better than a knighthood. Yep, it's a Megagame alright!
- 80° - 89° A real stonker of a game, this one! A barg at twice the price!
- 70° - 79° A good, old, honest game. It's sort of like rice or pasta.
- 60° - 69° Here's where they start getting dodgy!
- 50° - 59° It'll probably start to annoy you after a while.
- 40° - 49° Enough niggles to really annoy you.
- 30° - 39° Worse than that Jason megamix. Pretty appalling.
- 20° - 29° Not worth getting out of bed for, let alone going to the shop.
- 10° - 19° Unprintable!
- 0° - 9° So bad that there's no word in the dictionary suitable.

It's at times like these your brain is squashed down inside your skull and your eyes end up in your mouth. Gross, I know, but that's what it's like putting up with seriously high G-forces. So even Tom Cruise wouldn't look like Tom Cruise for long. He'd look like John Merrick.

So, with all this speed, the game is pretty difficult. As you play, you'll learn a technique. There are certain ways of dealing with planes which come in formations head on (it's usually hitting the M key for mega afterburner thrust), and there are manoeuvres you can do to get planes which attack from each side. I'm not going to tell you those though. Let's just say that you have to turn harder than the other planes in order to keep your bullets landing fairly and squarely on them. Clever, eh? Hutch discovered early on, that one of the best ways of consistently beating the enemy planes was to waggle the joystick violently left and right while hammering away at the fire button. Personally, I used a bit more finesse and simply launched a bevy of missiles at each convoy. Horses for cannon fodder I guess.

G-LOC is a game you've got to play a lot before you get good enough to really start enjoying it and getting the high scores. It's addictive enough to keep you trying, though and if you're looking for a 3D blast 'em up, then look no further. Anyway, let's face it, all good things take absolutely woggles of practise. For instance Danii Minogue wasn't born with the voice of a goddess, dear me know, she practised for years to sound like her big sister Kylie. However if your idea of sheer joy is to fly fast, fab jets then your quest is at an end and it looks as if you're found a personal Holy Grail which will enrich and rejuvenate your sad, shallow, games-playing life. Look, what I'm trying to say is that G-LOC is the game you should buy. I'm off for another go now. What ho chaps! ☺

Wile-E-Coyote

Hi Tec/£3.99 cassette

LINDA Rolf Harris' Cartoon Time was one of the best shows ever to grace the nation's television sets. Instead of just watching cartoons run into one another, there was the added attraction of our Rolf warbling and drawing the aced doodles ever. In just three seconds he could get the very essence of Bugs Bunnyness onto paper.

Wile E Coyote and Road Runner were Rolf Harris staples and, as with most cartoons, we loved it cos it was violent. Wile E Coyote spends his entire life trying to catch Road Runner who, in turn, spends his time eluding the nasty canine and making him run into walls and fall off of cliffs. It obviously didn't hurt him, cos after a few seconds of star-gazing our Wile was up and running. In fact Wile was, like all those cartoon nasties, completely indestructible. No matter how many times Tom got knocked senseless by dustbin lids and broom-wielding maids, no matter how often Sylvester swings for Tweety-pie and slams into the window you know that they're going to live to face another day.

What on earth is going on here? Is it a sand-storm? Is it an earthquake? No, it's Wile E and Road Runner and a couple of wormy things.

Happy bird-day

Unfortunately Hi Tec's Road Runner And Wile E Coyote hasn't got half the thrills of the original cartoon. You can't really do much to Wile E, except make him fall off of a cliff.

This is definitely the best bit of the game. As you hop just out of Wile E's reach, he goes tumbling down a massive abyss. Whoo!

You're the bird running over the gorge and that's Wile coming up behind you. This bit's quite exciting, actually.

There are two levels, well there are eight actually but four of them are the pretty much the same and the other four are, erm, very similar. The first of these levels has you pecking away at little piles of birdseed, avoiding sandworms and bombs, collecting apples, banging into power-ups and, most importantly of all, avoiding Mr Coyote who whizzes about like a very whizzy thing indeed.

You're up against a clock, so all you've got to do is survive the level and peck up as much birdseed as you can. This comes in dead handy in the next level, so concentrate all your efforts on getting all the seed in, rather than going for the bonuses. My copy had a very strange bug on it which allowed old Road Runner to jump up to the top right-hand corner of the screen and sit pretty 'til the clock finished ticking away. As long as I didn't move, I was okay. As bugs go, it was pretty handy but none of the other copies around seem to be faulty. Ho hum, perhaps it was a special treat, just for little old me.

BLIM!

Coyotes are also known as cased wolves. This is cos when they make fur coats out of coyotes, the wearer's likely to look like a grey coffin.

The second part of the game sees you running along with Wile E in hot pursuit. Basically, you just have to keep on running, jump up now and then to grab an apple or jump over the various unidentifiable obstacles that are strewn across the path. This is where all that birdseed comes in handy, you should have built up enough energy to outrun Wile E. If you haven't, well - you're dead meat. (Well, 'til the next game anyway.) The next six levels are basically the same again, except the graphics change ever so slightly and it gets harder.

Wile we're at it...

The colour is pretty crappy throughout cos the blues and yellows are so muted. What's worse are the appalling graphics. They just sink into the background and refuse to stand up and be counted. I was sitting inches from the screen and I still couldn't make out what was going on. I ended up pecking worms instead of birdseed and jumping over apples rather than bombs. It's also pretty difficult, pop your head up and Wile E will come zooming over. Pow!

There are only two moves to master in Road Runner And Wile E Coyote and that's along and up. Apart from the fact that I found it quite difficult to see anything, there isn't really anything massively wrong with this game. Thing is, there isn't anything outstandingly good about it either. It's just a plain run along and collect-'em-up.

Wile E's on a rocket, so keep your head down Road Runner! If you look closely at the grey bit, you might be able to see a worm. Jump!

I was disappointed, I expected a bit more from the Looney Tunes' licence. I'm not asking for much, but 'I'd like to be able to tell the difference between a worm and a pile of birdseed. Cheryade and a pair of bison are much more fun. (Bear up, bison!)

FAST THINGS THAT I HAVE KNOWN

Pot Noodles - probably one of this century's greatest inventions. They take about four minutes and contain plenty of nutritious value and only a few calories.

Porsche - I've never actually met a Porsche but I've heard that they're really fast.

Bankrobbers - probably the fastest non-athletes in the world. If these chaps formed an olympic running team they'd thrash Daley Thompson, Steve Cram and Ben Jonson - all in one go.

Noses - can be as fast as bankrobbers if you catch them in the right mood.

Sweetcorn - it goes straight through you.

Mirrorsoft/£9.99 cass £x.xx disk

JAMES Every year the centre of San Francisco gets cordoned off in preparation for the race of races. It seems that San Francisco is a dream city for people who like to drive around in car chases all the time, and the cops have a hard time keeping up with them all. So each year they close off the city centre and race each other just to prove how crap they are.

And hey presto! That's the scene set. Pretty simple stuff, isn't it? Well anyway, the result of all this is that you've got a racing game in 3D, which might or might not be like every other racing game on the Speccy. Let's have a look at it or, as they say in San Francisco, let's have a look at it, man.

You start off in a typical cop-car. You know the sort, the blue and white four door with a massive bonnet and boot, or hood and trunk as our Californian cousins might perhaps say. If you're still unsure as to what sort of a car this is, just think back to the sort of police vehicles you used to see in The Dukes Of Hazard; incidentally, they certainly should put back into its old slot of tea-time on Saturdays.

The car has two gears, high and low. In low it'll do around 100 mph, but when you slam it into high gear this will whizz up to a rather spanky 175 mph which is probably much faster than they can go in real life.

Do you go on the bridge?

Yes, well the game actually starts on the Golden Gate Bridge. You are close to the front of a pack of about ten other coppers, all in cars which look identical to yours, but are blue, whereas yours is a rather fetching shade of red.

At the top of the screen there are the usual Formula One lights, three red and one green. When the green one appears, you hit the gas-pedal. And everybody screeches past you. It's immensely annoying because you instantly lose your first place, even though you're accelerating as quickly as your car will go.

Mirrorsoft must have done this deliberately because you get so angry that you concentrate on winning; which is, after all, the idea of the game. So as most of the cars burn off up the road, you've got to knuckle down to some serious work.

First thing to do is suss out the gears. Although there are only two, it's a wee bit tricky changing between them.

What you've got to do is pull back on the joystick and hit fire at exactly the same time. You'll lose a bit of speed as you pull the joystick back, but with any luck you'll now be in the gear of your choice.

At 175mph it's pretty easy to start gaining back the places so long as the road is straight and the cars stay in their lanes. The problems start with the corners, hills and dangerous driving of the other coppers belting along in their panda cars.

Collision detection is a bit generous, shall we say. What seems to happen is that you can drive through other people, but your speed decreases to about 40mph. I wish that would happen in real life, but in the game it takes some getting used to.

Driving in a straight line is for wimps. If you can spin your car around like a waltzer and still qualify, you'll be a man my son. Cisco Heat is certainly one way of making that difficult but necessary transition from childhood to maturity without involving all your relatives.

The Streets Of San Francisco

All would be fine, dandy, and rather boring were it not for the corners and hills that make 'Frisco an interesting city rather than a corner-less, hill-less one.

The sides of the road are littered with all sorts of things like trees, bill-boards and telegraph poles. Hit them and one of two things could happen; you could spin the car round, losing large amounts of speed but keeping basically on the road. Or you could flip the car right upside down. This knackers your speed completely and will

5 FACTS ABOUT SAN FRANCISCO (AND HEAT)

- San Francisco will be completely pedestrianised by 1993. So there'll be no more car chases, Streets Of San Francisco or cop races.
- In 'Frisco in summer it approaches 130° F in the shade. So there's lots of heat there.
- There are so many hills there, it's impossible to play marbles anywhere. Instead, everybody has car chases (but what they'll be up to after 1993 is anyone's guess).
- Dirty Harry was filmed there. So was Blake's 7 and the Multi-Coloured Swap Shop.
- There's a bridge there, made completely of gold (with a gate built into it).

The start of the race is more confusing than simultaneous equations. You've got keep your eyes fixed on one path, ignore it completely and go all over the road(s). If there are bods in the middle of the road, hit the horn and they'll move out of the way as if by magic.

HEAT

It's not fair when this happens. You've only got one corner to go round and the blimmin' time runs out! It makes you want to pull out the Speccy's wires, jump on the Speccy and then get on quietly with your homework until tea-time and your mum calls you for toasted muffins.

almost certainly ruin your entire life. Well, as far as this attempt on the game is concerned anyway.

The race is divided into stages, and a large clock ticks away in the top left of the screen. If you get through the first stage, from the Golden Gate Bridge to Fisherman's Wharf, you get a whole chunk of extra time to blast your way further on towards the finish line.

Obviously, the stages get tougher as you get further into the game, with the added bummer that if you go really fast and build up a bank of spare time, it doesn't just possible to squeeze through on one side or the other, but if you fail, you'll be catapulted high into the air and, although you'll survive, you'll lose loads of speed and time.

Mirrorsoft have remained true to the Jaleco coin-op, and have put in some wicked intersection corners. What you're supposed to do is look out for the sign-posts at each intersection. If there aren't any you can whizz straight carry through onto the next stage. So each time you've just got to go like the wind, mama!

As well as the other cars, there's plenty of traffic which will happily get in your way. Obviously the police haven't done a very good job of cordoning off the centre of the city, because there are loads of cars, trucks and buses littering the roads.

These often occur at intersections, where the offending vehicle will straddle the road completely. How you get round it is up to you. It's

Well there is a way of doing it. If you whack the gears into low just as you approach the junction, the speed slams off and you are just able to squeal round the corner. But it's dead difficult and you'll be lucky if you don't have a little argument with the kerb.

Polite police please

Another weird feature which has been brought in from the coin-op is the horn. Pressing fire (or the space bar) beeps your horn, and, because you're driving against pretty law-abiding policemen, they move out of the way. It's a bit ridiculous to try and overtake somebody who's doing their best to block you, then beep your horn and watch the silly fool pull over and let you howl past.

Hmm. I think I've given you a pretty good idea of what's actually happening in Cisco Heat. But what I haven't said is what it's like to play.

Here's the bad news. Cisco Heat isn't really much cop (nice gag, that). It's a mono job, with a rather poor backdrop of a pretty unrecognisable cityscape. The road isn't solidly filled in or anything. It's just a load of flickering straight lines which scroll past with astonishing jerkiness.

This is the game's major problem. The frames chug past so slowly you've got time to see each one and notice how not-very-good it is. I've got the strong feeling that if everything was really quick, the graphics would look much better.

The jerkiness actually affects your gameplay, too. It makes the car unresponsive, so you have to move earlier than you need. This means that as well as fighting the twisty roads and the other road-users, you've actually got to make allowances for poor programming.

Cisco Heat has got lots of stages, and if you really concentrate on the flickery screen, it is possible to get quite far into it.

However, it just doesn't have the whizzy graphics or impression of speed that it needs. It's good, but it's not as completely brilliant as I expected it to be. You'd be better off with Power Drift on budget. ☹ across (avoiding any buses, trams or stranded cars). If there is a sign-post, you've got to wait until you can read it, then swerve violently in the direction it's pointing.

BLIM!

San Francisco was completely devastated by fire in the year 1906!

The bad news is that the intersections, like all intersections in the USA, are at right angles. So what you're being asked to do is go round a right angle bend at 175 mph. A tad tricky, don't you think?

Oops! If you let your tyres scuff the kerb you might end up seeing the world from a slightly different viewpoint (ie upside down and with your head caved in). So if you've always wanted to smash up cop cars like they did in the brilliant 'Dukes Of Hazzard' show, you can. Hurrah.

Cisco Heat doesn't take racing games places they've never been. It's not very good, really.

Moontorc

Atlantis/£3.99 cass

I like to think that the Moontorc in question is a necklace made of moonbeams that have been wrung from the moon like soapy water from a dishcloth.

(Why? Ed) Well, cos it's sort of grittily poetic. Unfortunately, the Moontorc in question is simply an amulet of magical and mysterious properties. Actually, I suppose it could be made out of galactic particles, it doesn't say that it isn't.

Moontorc, the game rather than the thing, is a flip-screen shoot and collect-'em-up. There are four levels to roam through and they're of the

BLIM!

The moon is, in fact, a natural satellite. Unlike most satellites it is not made of metal, it actually has a major iron deficiency. That's why it hasn't got any of those funny aluminium spiky things sticking out of it.

Pretty, isn't it? The four levels are shown on the right and all the characters on the left. What about that Princess Lalena, eh? Phwoar!

Here I am at ye olde shoppe. Two pints of milk, ten spells, a piece of Moontorc and a quarter of your finest lemon sherberts.

weirdly colourful sort. You're a little chap and you've got to rescue the truly wondrous Princess Lalena from the blistered hands of the truly smelly Dark Lord. Cos you're such a nice sort of guy you're obviously not used to being nasty. So you're going to need a bit of help.

The idea is to collect gold and keys and parts of the Moontorc so you can progress and say hi to your babe. Along the way there are plenty of shops to pop into and do the odd bit of purchasing. You won't actually be able to get very far in to the game without paying a visit to one of these shops as they sell everything you're likely to need along the way. There are spells to blast the baddies away with, weapons to do something pretty similar and keys to open doors that let you into other parts of the game. Oh, and you can pick up parts of the Moontorc. Once you've managed to survive long enough to collect a complete Moontorc you can go onto the next level.

Mushroom man

The graphics are very Dizzy-like; there are multi-coloured mushrooms to jump around on, plenty of little platforms and nicely detailed shops. Best of all, when you kill someone loads of little hearts replace the dead blokie. I thought it was all dead sweet, but sweetness doth not an excellent game make, as "Wish they would let me in, so I could find out what's behind the green door." I'll have to get that green key first though.

my Uncle Johnny who used to be a pop star once said.

The plot's fine and the graphics are beautiful – so why isn't it the best game in the universe? Well, your little chap isn't very well animated and he's not very good at moving. Just when you think you're about to land in a stream of molten acid, you step off a mushroom into mid-air. Then, when it's patently obvious that the space between you and the ledge is small enough for a mole to jump, you land in the acid stream and... poom!

If you hate flip-screener then this is obviously not the game for you. It's easy to see why they're so hated. Jumping off a platform and finding yourself face-to-face with a two-headed greed monster from hell isn't perhaps the best way to enjoy a game. Still, it's a nice enough gamette and one that should keep you occupied in that annoying space between the end of Neighbours and dinner time.

3D STOCK CARS 2

Challenge Software/£3.99 cass

What a particularly stupid sport stock car racing is. I mean, you spend about six months getting a car ready to be raced and then five minutes smashing it into other cars, walls, bystanders and areas of outstanding natural beauty. In fact, I think that it should be banned forthwith. If not sooner!

Anyway, who's played the SuperSprint game on the covertape? Right, well you lot should have a pretty good idea what this budge is all about. You see, 3D Stock Cars 2 is about racing around a series of circuits against three other cars. The only major differences between this game and SS are: a) you have to qualify before each race, b) the cars look like egg-boxes, c) you can design your own 'championship' and d) this game's crap.

The blurb on the tape inlay suggests that you can create your own championship. What this entails is choosing the order of the tracks and the number of laps you complete in each race. Not exactly gripping stuff! Nope I'm sorry 3D Stock Cars 2 is awful; the control method's dodgy, the cars look more like space invaders, the game's extremely evocative of SS and it gets terribly boring after ten minutes. Hurumph!

INTERNATIONAL SPEEDWAY

aaaaCodemasters/£3.99 cass

JAMES When I was a wee nipper, ooh, fewer years ago than I care to remember, I used to go to the Eastville Speedway circuit in Bristol every Wednesday night to watch the racing.

I often came away disappointed because the Speedway was only on Friday nights. But just seeing the track was enough – I became a fan for life.

And now the thrill of the dirt, the smell of the crowd and the noise of the hot-dogs has been recreated by the Codies in this budgetette. Tremblingly, I loaded it up...

When you start to play, you've got to type in your name. Fair enough, but you must also type in your nationality. Er, okay. You must also type in your continent. Oh, good grief! Once you've done that, though, it's time to a race. This is where things get even more exciting than they were before. That is as long as you thought they were exciting before.

You race three other guys, and you view a 3D display of the track in the top half of the screen. The bottom half is taken up with a picture of your purple helmet and a top-view of the oblong-ish circuit. On this map there are four large blobs. These are the racers, so it's easy to see where everybody else is if you can't actually view them in the 3D action-packed screen above.

Racing around the circuit is pretty simple in theory. You just twist open the throttle and hope for the best. When a corner comes up, you ease off on the speed a bit and swing the bike's botto out as fast as you can. It's all done using only two keys, or directions on the joystick, if you will.

The idea is to keep on the racing line all the way round. Not only does this keep your speed up, it also stops the other dudes whizzing past (but they'll have a go anyway). One of the other guys is as fast as you, the other two are a bit slower. So if you do everything right, you should be able to beat them all. But this is where the problems start.

I don't know about the copies on the streets, but ours in the Shed had a bit of a dodgy control system. It accelerated, seemed to slow down, went left a bit then decided to go straight for a while, took out a mortgage and set up a cosy cottage near Newmarket with its wife and children. Strange, eh?

This apart, International Speedway is rather quick, smooth and playable. It's repetitive though, with just the one circuit to whizz round. I suppose that this shouldn't be too much of a surprise cos the real thing is exactly the same. If you're a great fan, which I've just decided I'm not, you might want to get hold of this. Before you do, here's a quick warning – it's just a bit boring. ☹

Oh yes, Mrs Higginbotham! I'd love another helping of cranberry tart!

Come back!
Come back!
The man hasn't said
'go' yet!

Hmm. The outside of the circuit doesn't seem to be the best place for overtaking. In fact, it's positively useless. We live and learn eh, readers.

JIMMY'S SUPER LEAGUE

Beyond Belief/£3.99 cass

JAMES So there were these two nuns, and one says to the other, "Do you believe in life insurance?" And the other one says...oh, sorry, have we started doing the review now? Erm, I'll tell you the rest of the joke later, Hutch.

Apologies for that, readers. You joined us a little early. Anyway (sounds of paper shuffling), let's get on. Jimmy's Super League, yes indeed. This is another management sim from the Beyond Belief stable. In fact it was programmed behind that pile of dimly-lit straw next to the horse feed.

You've got a team of eleven strapping young feller-me-lads raring to go and play a tough game of ninety minutes, two halves and a spell in the sin bin.

Everything is controlled from a main office with a PC on the desk, a phone and a filing cabinet. You simply move the cursor onto the telephone or computer or whatever and you can go for a quick training session with the lads, play the game, look at very long lists of names and numbers and so on. There's masses of highly exciting detail on each bod, even down to what they had for breakfast. This is actually very important to a player's mental and physical agility, and can mean the difference between them being sick on the pitch or not.

League Facts

- ★ A league is actually 3.456 miles.
- ★ A league is something plumbers come to fix.
- ★ The Human League was a crap New Wave band.

All this detail is fine and groovy, and it adds a lot of atmosphere to a pretty boring game. But this doesn't hide the fact that it's still just an okayish footie management sim, and all you really need to do is select eleven players. Amongst the list of names you'll find that of the internationally famous W Scribo – art critic, deep sea diver, wok assembler and part-time pipe cleaner. Where would Beyond Belief be without him, eh?

The best bit is the game itself. You get both a commentary and an edited goal-mouth graphical action sequence. A David Coleman-type chap sits and watches each game carefully, making suitable comments in a scrolly line box, like "Nobel prizewinner W Scribo has the ball. He passes to W Scribo, famous author, who gets into position and shoots. But it's a great save by the Scribo twins (both minor Norse gods, of course) in goal!"

A side-on view of the goal shows some enterprising dude rushing on (it's usually our fave, Sir W of Scribo MBE) to have a shot. You can watch with bated breath as he whacks the ball at the net. If the goalie is alert, he can get in the way, otherwise it's a classic goal of the sort which will crop up on A Question Of Sport in years to come.

What Super League lacks, of course, is an action packed 90 minutes of full-screen on-pitch action. The only way you can get an idea of what's going on is to read what the commentator is saying. It's like an extremely weird cross between listening to the radio and watching the telly.

The only other fault of Super League is that it's as slow as almost every other management sim. You keep wondering whether your Speccy has crashed. I know that the computer is actually making lots of lovely calculations while you're watching a blank screen, but couldn't they display a little animation or show us the latest stock and share prices or something? Even Ceefax would be more interesting than a screen with the words 'Please Wait' on them.

So, in conclusion, Jimmy's Super League is proof that management sims are getting better. Most people still prefer a shoot-'em-up, but mannie sims (as they're known in the biz) have reached new heights, it would seem. ☺

This is perhaps one of the saddest offices I've ever seen. I'd rather work in a mortuary than have to look at those green walls. Urgh!

PAPERBOY 2

Mindscape
£15.99 Disk/£10.99 Cass

HUTCH How many of you lovely peeps have, or used to have, a paper-round? Hmmm, so it would appear that approximately 50 percent of the population has been completely and utterly ripped off by newsagents who pay an absolutely pathetic wage to gullible kids and any other down and out unfortunates who find themselves suddenly in need of dosh. I mean come on, you get up at about five o'clock in the morning, rain or shine and proceed to spend about an hour and a half shoving weighty scandal-sheets through tiny letter-boxes for about 50p a day. Daylight robbery! Paper-people throw off your shackles and play this game instead. (You weren't ever a paperboy were you, Hutch? Linda.)

Yes, but that doesn't mean I'm bitter or anything. Anyway, what we have here is the follow-up to that ever-so-successful gamette

Paperboy. In this revised version there's now a lovely red and yellow two on the box and ermm, some other tweaks to the gameplay.

Tweaks?

You know the kind of thing. Spiced up graphics, improved sound, greater options; tweaks. In Paperboy 2, the main difference is largely cosmetic. You see, instead of just scrolling up the screen at an odd angle from bottom left to top right, Paperboy 2 scrolls from the bottom right to the top left as well. What this means is that instead of just delivering papers to one side of a street, you've got to cover both sides.

The idea of the game is to lob newspapers into people's mailboxes. Get your timing wrong and the newspaper will smash a window, knock down a trash can, ruin a picket fence or even knock down a gravestone. If you're too generous with the newspapers, then for every stray object which you hit, you'll lose a certain amount of points. If you miss a house on your rounds, then they'll cancel their subscription. When everyone's cancelled, you're fired and it's time to put the bike back in the shed.

My word, there's one of the police's new deterrent traffic cones. It's the size of a small house and thus completely indestructible.

It might sound easy, but believe me it isn't. There are all sorts of suburban horrors waiting to knock you off your bike; kids in go-karts, men carrying pianos, trucks and cannonballs (no, really!) are just waiting to wipe that Golden Grahams smirk off your face.

Doesn't sound too thrilling

Ah, yes. However, once you get terribly good at Paperboy 2, you can start having some real fun. For instance, in this particular cul-de-sac of suburbia there are jumps all over the place. Thus you can pedal like mad right across someone's front garden and perform a neat jump right over the fence into next door's prize purple begonias.

What's more, if you actually manage to survive both sides of a street, you get to attempt the assault course.

This has got loads of bales of hay, targets and water jumps. However, if you make so much as one teensy-weensy mistake you finish the ride and don't get any bonus points.

Once your end of day score has been calculated, you can head off home to bed, lay your head down on the pillow and get some serious zzz's in. You see, you'll need a straight head for tomorrow's exertions when you'll do exactly the same with more obstacles in the way and more houses to deliver to.

It's all a tremendous giggle. The graphics are groovy and there's very little colour clash. Your paperboy scrolls around pretty darned smoothly, even though a close-up of his crashes

BLIM!

An American once pulled a wheelie for four hours 21 minutes. However not one girl was impressed and he promptly went to the cinema alone.

would have been nice. Sound's a tad mediocre, but then how do you make a paper round sound?

There are two problems with this game. Firstly the collision detection's absolutely crap. You can be peddling along nowhere near a hedge or anything and the game will suddenly decide you're doing far too well and stick a large stick into your front wheel's spokes.

Secondly, it's not that different to the original Paperboy. In fact, about the only substantial changes are that you can choose what sex your paper-person is and you also get to deliver to both sides of the street! Vehicles still emerge from side streets like they did in the original and kids still attack you on the pavements with go-karts. The odd new hazard has been bunged in for good effect. For instance a runaway horse comes belting out of a wood at one point and there's a house which dislikes you so much they lob cannonballs at you. Paperboy 2's a groovesome game, but it's more like Paperboy 1.3.

Some inconsiderate poo-head's gone and left a huge Rubik cube right in the middle of the path. Just as well I'm a foxy-chick and thus a much quicker-thinker than your average paper-person!

While out on his paper-round, our intrepid paperboy encounters a randy space-hopper with rabies. The youth today, eh?

WRITE TO THE ED, YS, 30 MONMOUTH STREET, BATH BA1 2BW

Star Letter winners receive three free games! All letters win a YS badge!

I'm feeling a bit down this month, Spec-chums. I'll be okay in a bit, I just hate the first couple of weeks after Christmas. It's cold, it's dark and there are no pressies to look forward to. Still, it gives me a chance to polish my skateboard and darn my rad clobber. Come the spring I'll be ready to roll with the best of them. Yep, I'll turn into a beautiful butterfly, flying off kerbs and swooping up hills... Well, I can dream, can't I?

Outside the Shed it looks like snow, inside it looks a mess. Never mind, Linda can tidy it up and I can answer your letters. On with the show...

MARVYOUS

I would have written this sooner, but every time I pick up a pen I feel faint cos it reminds me of work and I have to lie down. I was writing to tell you that I think YS is rad and très outré, marvy and hip. It also makes me feel young again and I was hoping that you'd give me a job.

Now, tell me if I'm mad but Daath is where dreams are formulated and where the hidden thoughts lie. It's got a real world twin and it's certainly not an easy way out, but it is chaotic. So get lost in a tree.

You should listen to Crass, they're heavy.

Laz Taylor
Crouch End, London

Marvy, eh? I like it. It's a shame that you're obviously completely off your rocker. If you really want a job here you've gone about it the wrong way. You've flattered us, which is a good start, but it's all downhill from there.

I mean, what is all this nonsense about Daath? I'll tell you what it is – a load of juggling balls. Next you'll be telling me that the Confucian theory of dualism is a really rad philosophy. (Actually, the whole idea of everything having an opposite and... Linda) Shut up, Linda. As for Crass, give us a break. It's bad enough having to Andy O's punk nonsense without the threat of some smelly anarchist band. You can't have a job. Basically. Ed.

TRUTH WILL OUT

Ha! Ha! Let the truth be told at last. For I have uncovered your dastardly secret hitherto unknown to the general public. I will shower you with facts and figures to prove that you, Mr Hutchinson, are no less than a Timelord on a strange secret mission...

● Fact – The constant change of appearance and personality.

● Fact – Your odd outward appearance and strange beliefs.

● Fact – The Shed in which a coachload of people work is a Tardis-like building. Large on the inside yet small on the outside. Damning evidence, eh?

BB

Bromley, Kent

Damn! I thought I'd disguised myself so well, too. My cunning disguise as a skateboarding, EMF freak is obviously not as good as I thought it was. Tom Baker wore a ridiculously long scarf and got away with it. Pih.

Actually, I don't think you've got your facts very well sorted at all. Fact one – I haven't changed my appearance at all, I've always worn T-shirts and baseball caps and I probably always will. As for these supposed personality changes – humbug.

Fact two – my outward appearance isn't odd at all. I have two legs, two arms, a nose, a mouth and all the other things that human beings generally have. As for the clothes, they aren't in the slightest bit odd. And neither are my beliefs.

Fact three – you've got me there. The Shed is small yet it contains so much. In fact, maybe you're right, maybe I am odd. Oh dear, that twelfth finger wasn't there before. And while we're on the subject, how come nobody else is wearing a wig? Ed.

AN ELDERLY CHAP WRITES

I would just like to inform you that all your readers are not as young as your readers believe. (Sorry? Ed) Well, I don't believe it anyway.

Judging by your Letters pages you must have some very intelligent and witty youngsters, or some that are not as young as they make out. (Young people can be quite intelligent and witty, actually. Ed)

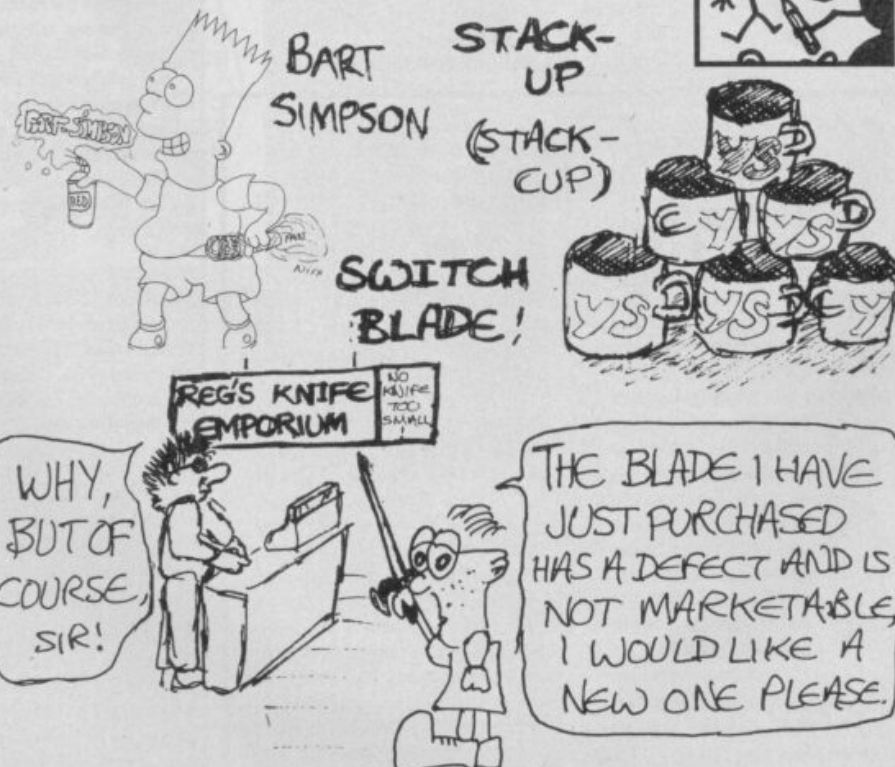

I have been a reader of YS for a few years now and I don't mind admitting that I'm in my late twenties.

I know I'm not the oldest reader as my mother has been a YS reader for longer than me. I won't tell you her age, but I will tell you that I have a sister who is eight years older

DOODLEBUGS

Toilet humour, eh? You can't beat it. I don't really understand sophisticated humour, Linda's jokes always go way over my head, so John Copley's Fart Simpson was just my style. On a more mature note, there's Stack Up and Switchblade by, erm, somebody who wishes to remain nameless. Can't say I blame him really.

than me. Come on the older generation, admit it – it's not childish to play computer games and read YS. It's enjoyable.

J Foster
Hull

I'm sorry to have to inform you that you are not old. In fact, you're probably only a few years older than me and I'm not at all wrinkled. It's my belief that you're as young as you feel, and I think that your letter just goes to show what a strange society we live in. Around the age of 22 people start to think they're getting old, I know this for a fact cos I see it happening everyday. (No names mentioned.)

'J', you've got years and years ahead of you so stop feeling sorry for yourself and get sorted. Even if your mum's 79, which is quite unlikely, she's not as old as our next reader. Come in, Mrs Turner. Ed.

OOH, YOU YOUNGSTERS!

With reference to page eight of your October issue, you seem to think that you youngsters have the monopoly. I'd like to reply to the points made in Pssst.

I don't know what to say, I'm completely overcome. I don't think anybody's ever said such a nice thing to me. I'm sorry I can't say something as nice about you but, well, I hardly know you.

Actually readers, I'll come clean. I haven't the slightest idea what old Abdon's talking about. But I like to think that it's something witty and charming cos that's just the kind of dude I am. Ed.

Mrs Turner
Brighton, East Sussex

What is it with age this month? I got so many letters from people claiming that old people are really ace. You don't have to tell me that, everybody knows that grandparents are one of the better things in this world. Who else is going to stick up for you when it seems that the whole world is against you? Who else would go without Murray Mints just so you can have that really wicked T-shirt that your mum refuses to buy for you?

There's nothing in this world quite like grandparents. It's true that there are some miserable old people out there, but there a load of horrible young people too. I don't believe in all this age-ist crap. Rave on, Mrs Turner. Ed.

CRAPNESS AHoy!

FEMTO PICO

CLEVEREST SCIENTIST ON EARTH

Femto's back after a Christmas holiday which would have put most people in a mahogany casket with flowers on the top. But he's soldiering on despite even more setbacks...

It's a crime wave. I woke up a couple of weeks ago to see those Gaelic popsters U2 breaking into my brand new Trabant, parked outside the flat. Panicking, I struggled into my clothes but misguidedly put both feet into one leg of my dungarees. As I hopped outside and up to the car (which Bono and The Edge were just hot-wiring), I lost my footing and fell over a full can of paint-stripper.

The contents of the can went all over my beautiful car, and within seconds there wasn't a scrap of paint left on its gorgeous bodywork. Guttled, I started to cry. To my astonishment I heard the whole of U2 start blubbing along with me. Sniffing, they said how sorry they were, and how they hadn't wanted to turn to crime, but they'd been a bit short of money since the release of The Joshua Tree and just couldn't resist trying the door handles.

So I left them with their spray cans to get on with a respray. About twenty minutes later I came back and hey presto! An album cover was born!

They'd also made a hell of a mess of my car. Who's going to pay for that, eh? Now a letter.

Dear Femto

Thanks for making my video. I know it cost a few bob, but I reckon it was well worth it. All the shape-changing stuff you included was a dead good idea. So I'm well chuffed, me. Cheers.

Michael Jackson

I know what you're thinking readers, but the video I made was for The Michael Jackson Carpet Shop in Pinner. Mike asked me to do a local TV ad for the Axminster Stane-Rezist Shape Change Fit-U-Like shag-pile.

See you next time readers. And remember, 6pm to 6.05 is Happy Hour in the Neon Teepee, Penge. You can get a Cola for just £5.22 and every one you buy makes us very happy indeed. Femto

PETER SNOW'S DEAD SERIOUS CORNER

SOB

I would just like to express my feelings on a certain point. Sixteen bit games are not being converted to the Spectrum. With 346K per +3 disk it would only take three disks for a one megabyte programme and the sound and graphics would not take as much memory anyway.

David Groves
Abbeymead, Gloucester

You're absolutely right David, software houses are ignoring one of the most successful computers ever, in pursuit of those other 16 bit creations. That's why next month, we'll be starting our Save Our Speccy (SOS) campaign. Inside the magazine you'll find a letter which you can sign and then send off to the big software houses. This letter does woggles of complaining about the lack of support for the Speccy. So if you want to continue getting many years of use from your beloved computer, fill in the letter and send it off to the software houses. Ed.

DOUBLE SOB

I was on the school bus yesterday (as is usual on a week day) and we were talking about how good computers are (as is usual on a week day) when I asked what computer everybody had. They had Amigas, STs and Megadrives. When I said I had a Speccy they all burst into fits of giggles. I just couldn't understand it.

So now I sit on my own in a remote corner of the bus talking to myself about how ace Spectrums are. They do say it's the first sign of madness.

Dominic Scarr
Hull

Listen Dominic, the next time these goons take the mickey out of the Speccy, simply ask them how many STs or Amigas have been sold worldwide. When they reply by saying "about a million," point out that there are about five million Speccys out there. Then ask them if their 16 bit machines will be around after ten years. I think you'll find them changing their tune after you lob these statistics at them. If they don't, give me a ring, and I'll come round and give them a good hard kicking! Ed.

That really isn't very good, Johan. In fact, it's completely appalling and I'm sitting here completely appalled. Fish are kickin' and you've insulted them. In response, I'd like to share with you my fish ode. It's called Bream.

Little fishy in the stream,
Cool and silent as a dream,
How do you fit into the scheme
Of things, bream?

Romantic, isn't it? If I wasn't a magazine editor, I'd be a poet. Not one of those soppy poets, mind. I don't really agree with frilly shirts and bow-ties. I'd be a rad, street poet. I'd cruise around on my board, making up individual and witty rhymes to everything that crossed my path! Ed.

SORRY?

Yo! Howz't hanging, cool dude man? That bad, huh? Never fear, I'm here to put a hearty smile back on the depressed rad dudes of our nation. I mean, how can it be? Is it true? Did our awesome bunch of kickers finally run out of kick? For a supposedly crap bunch coming second in the world is pretty radical stuff. Like hanging ten whilst standing on your head, man! Hang ten.

Rob 'Rad' Little
Guildford, Surrey

I'm sorry, do I know you? I suppose that this is just the sort of letter I should expect if I go round skateboarding and using the word rad. But, you've got it all wrong, Rob. Real street dudes do not go round saying things like 'I'ze', they only do that in films. But you're nearly there, a couple more years hangin' out and you'll be okay.

I used to think 'Hang Ten' was an ace phrase but I've just been informed that it was the title of a Soupdragons' song before they were cool. So I'm not going to use it anymore, and I advise you to do the same. Ed.

STOOPID

The whole idea of you being mates with EMF is one of the stupidest things I've ever heard.

Jonathan Cant
Hebden Bridge, Yorkshire

Well, you obviously haven't heard about the time James drove into a stop sign. Or the time Linda fell asleep in the toilets at a gig and missed the whole thing?

And how about the time I did a plain header dive into the 2' 6" end of the pool and broke my nose? Oh, I know loads of stupid things. Ed.

TRAINSPOTTERS

GET IT RIGHT

I would like to claim a Trainspotter cos in issue 72 you wrote "if he falls off he could get a nasty bump." I may be stupid and mad but I do know that their (sic) is no such word in the English Language as ould. Get out of that one if you can. Ha! Ha! Ha!

Kenny Cooper
Dunkinfield, Cheshire

Sorry and everything, but I happen to think that Trainspotters should only be awarded to people who can write a nine line letter without getting anything wrong. Call me Mr Meanie, but that's my honest opinion. I think you'll find that "their is no such" should be "there is no such". Ha! Ha! Ha! Ed.

NO WAY

I want to tell you about your thick mistake in issue 72. In the top 100 games of all time you start from 100 and go to 75. Then you go from 74 to 50. Then you go from 49 to 24 instead of 25. So please, with sugar on top, give me a Trainspotter Award.

Ross Avis
Newcastle Upon Tyne

There's absolutely no way you can have a Trainspotter. There are no set rules that say we have to have a certain number of Top 100 placings each month. It all depends on things that you know nothing about, like layout and design and what I feel like. Ed.

TOO EASY

I hereby claim two Trainspotter Awards for spotting two mistakes in your mag. The first, oh delectable supplement, is for noticing that your December covertape was marked number eight, despite being number nine. A brilliant observation if ever there was one.

The second, oh stupendously excellent mag, is in your top 100 games of all time. You say that Rafeale Cecco only made one good game. Incorrect! You are obviously not counting Exolon.

Alex Hannam
Linton, Cambridge

Sorry, you can't have two Trainspotters, you can't even have one. Your first observation was commonplace in the extreme. I think I must have opened about a thousand Trainspotters this month and they all mentioned the fact that we put the wrong number on the tape. It got so boring that I had to make James open all the letters whilst I took a three hour lunch break to check out the Addams family. It was ace.

Your second claim rests on opinion rather than fact, so it doesn't count. The Top 100 reflected what Stuart thought, not what he knew. You can know that two and two are four, you cannot know that any band are the best in the world. Well, I can but then I'm an editor. Ed.

SMALL PRINT

I love Maryanne. She is so lovely. Adam Mitten, Rochester, Kent Actually, she's a slime monster from hell and you're welcome to her. Ed.

Do you ever feel alone at night when you are playing on your computer. Clint Page, Bristol Come off it! I'm a popular and rockin' dude. Alone isn't a concept I'm familiar with. Ed.

Bath is so rockingly rocktastic that it's hard not to be overcome with excitement.

Jazzy B, Bath That's how I feel about Baywatch extras. Ed.

Have you seen my runaway cabbage? Calli Flow, Bolton If he was a bit crusty with a limp he went that way. Ed.

I think your long addresses for your compos are stupid. Colin Brown, Glasgow I think your Doctor Who pyjamas are stupid. And don't try and pretend that you haven't got any. Ed.

DOUBLE DRAGON

Storm's Double Dragon 3 has hit town. There's loads of violence, plenty of punching and a bit of kicking. We sent Linda Barker off for a spot of aggro, and we made sure we weren't around when she got back.

The all-action, oriental beat-'em-up is back, with all our old friends in tow. There's the pretty but dim Marion, her man Billy and his best mate Jimmy. These are the good guys, on the other side of the room we have the forces of evil – it's the dreaded Black Warrior gang.

This time the Black Warrior gang, in a desperate attempt to keep Marion all to themselves, have issued a ransom demand. Bill and Jim have got to find the Rosetta Stones, hand them over pretty sharpish and kick a lot of people.

Now, Rosetta Stone were an extremely crap seventies pop band from Bristol who pretended to be the Bay City Rollers, nobody believed them and they sank into obscurity. Why, oh why, would anyone in their right mind want Rosetta Stone? Obviously, these villains are out of their tiny little minds. (I don't think they mean the pop band actually, Linda. Ed)

Oh, hang on, let's have

Get up and fight like a man, you lily-livered cowardly chicken-head! And you wipe that smile of your face, young man. Oh, and get a decent haircut for goodness' sakes.

a look in the encyclopedia. Ah, the real Rosetta Stone is a slab of black rock covered in Greek and Egyptian hieroglyphics. It was a pretty big discovery cos it meant that hieroglyphics could finally be deciphered for the first time. It's now in the British museum. Here's another question – are Bill and Jim meant to break into the British museum? Well, no. Cos the Stones, for the pur-

I've just got to nip in here and pick up the latest Chesney Hawkes LP before going off for another round of serious fighting. With any luck it'll get totally destroyed in the melee!

Oh! Aren't you that construction-worker bloke out of the Village People? Yeah! You are! I saw you back in 1980 playing the cabaret circuit. You looked really stupid and I thought all your songs were complete crap. I was appalled. Can I have your autograph?

This punk is a wee bit tougher than most of the other weeds. He's got a punch like an elephant's head-butt and he can take a massive amount of punishment. But tickle him and he's as weak as a baby. Note how the city's architecture is lovingly reflected in the windows.

SON 3

The other two

Double Dragon from Melbourne House kicked off the series in the beginning of 1989. It was a coin-op conversion in which the lush and gorge Marion got taken away by the Black Warriors for the very first time. Bill (and Jim, if you used the two-player option) went after her and had a jolly good time kicking, slicing and slashing every nasty ninja who crossed the garden path. Eventually he got old Marion back and the two lived happily after. Well, until Marion got carted off again.

Double Dragon 2 was released by Virgin and was even better than DD1. Marion, who seems to be a bit of a dozy cow, went and got herself kidnapped again. Y'see, Bill and Jim hadn't killed the entire Black Warrior gang at all. A girlie with the rather evil and hard name of Linda survived and brought all the others back to life. This time the Black Warrior gang refused to take any chances with soppy Marion and, erm, killed her. So it's a bit of the same again please. Basically.

Ah! Ye Olde Weapon Shoppe. Perfect for picking up those after-dinner knuckle-dusters.

There's three of you and one of me, and you've punched my face in. Let's call it a draw.

You're supposed to fight, not teach me poncy dance steps, you lanky buffoon!

pose of the game, have ended up back in Egypt somewhere. (There are also more than one of them.) To get to the stones Bill and Jim have to consult the wise old, bearded Hiruko and race through five countries. Each country (US of A, China, Japan, Italy and Egypt) represents a level and each is split into 14 smaller bits. On each bit you have to try out all their fancy moves on loads of aliens. Yep, aliens. Y'see they started all this trouble in the first place, and there are loads of them to get rid of.

So, it's an oriental beat-'em-up with, erm, a few aliens hanging around. You can choose the single player option, but you might as well get Jim in on the act and go for the two-player option. After all, that's why it's got the word double in the title, isn't it?

The world's strongest enemies

- Jeremy Beadle
- Hunger
- Greed
- The Welsh rugby team
- Jealousy
- The entire capitalist/ Imperialist system (one for all you anarchists)
- David Bowie
- Pride
- Santa's Xmas Capers
- Chicken McNuggets

What's new, pussycat?

The original DD was noted for its 3D effect whereby you could crawl up, over and into things. The same sort of thing happens here, so you can throw things at your enemies and pick up and use any useful stuff that you find lying around. At the end, Storm promise that you'll come up against the world's strongest enemy. But they won't tell us what it is, boo hoo!

There's more baddies than in any other Double Dragon game and they're tonnes tougher. Luckily there's also a wonderful little shop which sells the most amazing mortadella, erm, I mean weapons. Here you can buy all manner of death dealing and cranium-cracking devices like nunchukas, grenades, missiles, knuckledusters and swords and extra lives. Gee, a shop which sells life. I wonder what form it comes in, solid or liquid? If none of these grabs your fancy, how about handing over a few pennies for a locking head squeeze, a handstand ankleflip or a one armed head-butt?

If, after all this, you still feel a tad under-armed just kill someone. Y'see, you also have the option of taking on the skills of your opponents too.

Just one last thing – it's due to be made into a multi-million dollar film. Hurrah, or what? *

the million dollar fillum

● In which Harrison Ford makes his way from his farm in Indiana to Egypt via China, Japan and Italy. Along the way he becomes involved with some chopstick-wielding baddies, an egg-foo yung breathing dragon and a femme fatale clothed entirely in empty egg boxes. He gets the Stones, gets his girl and takes the first plane home. 30,000 feet above Tibet hijackers appear... to be continued.

● In which Bruce Willis leaves his penthouse suite in New York to travel to Egypt. Along the way he loses his shoes. Before getting the Stones he obviously has to find his shoes. This involves a rather long journey through China, Japan and Italy. It also involves lots of swearing, sweating and walking on glass. When he gets to Egypt, he finds the Stones in a large air-conditioned hotel. As he leaves, the whole building bursts into flames... to be continued.

● In which the KLF visit Des Moines and pick up an ice-cream van for the paltry sum of $3. Their trip to Egypt (via China, Japan and Italy) involves lots of flakes, wicker men, crashes and comets. When they get to Egypt they disguise the Stones as 50 pence cones. Oh, and Marion is played by Tammy Wynette.

BUBBLE DIZZY

CodeMasters/£3.99 cass

The Codies seem to take great delight in mistreating their little pet egg, Dizzy. He's been thumped, kicked, bashed, scrambled and dropped in his games so far. Now the cruel so and sos want to drown him.

Actually, CodeMasters are using this game to fill in a blank in Dizzy's rather stupid history. There seems to be a fuzzy part of his life in between when Captain Blackheart made Dizzy walk the plank and when he was washed up on the island in Treasure Island Dizzy.

Avast, ye barnacled varmint! Shiver me timbers or I'll gi' ye a lick o' the cat, ye lily-livered landlubbers! (Was that all right, Larry?)

Bubble Dizzy is supposed to tell the mystic tale of what went on in those fear-filled moments. You see, the water he was dropped into was rather deep. He tumbled into a series of underwater caverns, and arrived at the bottom in one piece. Now of course, he wants to head for the surface even though, being an egg, he doesn't actually breathe.

To rise through the water, Dizzy has to hitch a ride on the bubbles which are coming out of the sea bed. The bubbles, which are rather fragile things (according to CodeMasters), burst after a while, so he must make the ride last as long as possible.

I've got a query about this. If the bubbles Dizzy's riding on are underwater, how can they burst? Where does the air go? Up his bum? The simple truth is that bubbles can't burst underwater. I checked in the YS Book Of All World Knowledge and it confirmed that the Codies are talking crap.

Anyway, as well as these bubbles, there are oysters containing pearls which you need to collect. These are guarded by vicious sea creatures. There are electric eels, huge whales, sea horses and other fishy foes, aquatic adversaries and piscine perils. (Good bit of writing, that.)

5 FRIGHTENING UNDERWATER FACTS

- The Loch Ness monster lives underwater, but has been seen crossing local roads in the dead of night.
- Most electrical things don't work underwater, except, strangely, submarines (and aqualungs).
- And James Bond's car.
- A man once spent four hours underwater in a swimming pool without an aqualung, but when he came up he was dead.
- The moon has no water on it, but if it did, there'd probably be loads of otters and trout living there. And bream. And chub. And halibut.

Some more good writing

The game has got about eight levels, each following on from the last in some vaguely logical order. (Have you actually played this game, James? Ed) For example, you eventually come ashore next to the ship where the evil Captain threw you in, then you've got more to worry about than simple bubbles. Yes indeed, there are land creatures giving you grief.

The thing with Bubble Dizzy is that it relies tremendously on luck. The bubbles emerge at random, and the only way to rise on them is by jumping on a slow one or leaping into space and hoping for a fast one to come up and catch you from behind. The bubbles burst in all the wrong places, no doubt because the programmers had a bad drive into work that morning. This means that you'll usually have to leap just as it bursts in order to get onto a ledge.

Luckily, the sea creatures around you move in set patterns. They ignore you completely, making it possible for you to try and time your upwards moves when they aren't directly overhead. Sounds fine in principle, but when you're panicking cos you haven't seen a bubble for ages and the shark is coming around for another pass, you'll forget everything you're supposed to be doing and just hammer the fire button to jump.

Proof that sharks will eat eggs. Dizzy, having fallen off a bubble, disappears down the throat of a ferocious undersea predator. This bit would be even more enjoyable if you could hear his screams as he's munched by the monster.

Graphics and sound are well up to the usual Codies standard, and Dizzy is just as you've always known him, if slightly more hard-boiled. He's still pretty much a sprightly little fellow with bouncing arms and a variety of facial expressions. Shame he's going to drown, then isn't it? (Hur hur.)

In an increasingly monochrome Speccy world, there's plenty of colour around as well. It's rather touching and, I always feel, slightly moving (Steady on, Monsieur Leach. Ed) to see that CodeMasters are still making their games bright, brash, noisy and exciting, oh, and rather smooth with it, even if there is the odd colour attribute clash.

Yes indeed, Bubble Dizzy is an arcade-type game of the choicest amusement. It's as addictive as only the Codies know how. Well, a few other people know how as well, but probably not quite as much as the Codies.

Anything wrong with it? Well, as I said so succinctly above, it's a rather tough game, relying on your dogged persistence and gritted teeth rather than incredible skill and bodacious timing. This is the main difference between this Dizzy game and all the others. Also, there are no quests to go on like in the other Dizzscapades.

Dizzy rises happily on his egg, unaware that his head is about to be crushed in by that overhanging ledge above him. If this happens he falls back to the bottom and you cry.

Oh yeah, and Dizzy can't go round collecting things to use later, either. So in fact the two styles are really rather different.

So, if you don't mind being frustrated and annoyed because you've just fallen to the sea-bed for the thousandth time, pick up Bubble Dizzy in WH Smith's, walk briskly up to the sales staff and express your desire to own it. It's fairly wise to make sure you have the correct payment about your person at this stage. If you haven't, you'll be in for a serious bit of embarrassment. Anyway, assuming you do have the monies required, those ever-friendly and helpful staff should ease you through the following financial transaction effortlessly. You are then free to leave the shop with your newly-acquired purchase. The game is then yours to treasure or transform into a brooch. The decision is yours! ☺

BLIM!

The first person to make smelly bubbles in the bath was Confucious. This happened the morning after he ate the very first baked bean, egg and kebab sandwich!

YS ADVENTURES

TIM KEMP's decided that Tim's a really unadventurous name, so he's changing it to Zzowervyxx. It won't last.

To say that the adventure scene has been 'buzzing' lately would be a colossal understatement. For a few years now there has been only one main adventure fanzine on the scene. Sure, other 'zines have come and gone over the years, but Adventure Probe has been the mainstay, if not the backbone, of home produced adventure publications for over five years. I thought I'd have a bash at publishing one too, and came up with From Beyond. Now I find that several other fanzines exist, and are really going strong. If you have heard of ZAT, The Adventure And Strategy Club and Red Herring (the new one on the scene) then you should, by now, have treated yourself to a copy of each of them. (It's the only way to find out exactly what they're like.) Those are just the paper 'zines - there's a whole host of tape-zines too! In a future issue I'll be reporting fully on the adventure 'zine scene and will endeavour, from time to time, to keep you fully informed on what's available, what's happening, what's good and what's not.

But hold on... it's not just the fanzine producers that have multiplied of late. Zenobi Software were the only 'Big Boys' on the adventure game scene until recently, though now we have GI Games (specialising in classic re-releases and golden oldies), and another addition to the adventure publishing clan has just emerged. The Guild, for such is its name, hasn't just burst onto the scene - it's exploded.

Most prominent among the initial batch of games is a brilliant compilation tape featuring some of the very best adventures that you're ever likely to see. This compilation goes under the title of Guildmasters Vol 1 and features: Into The Mystic by Jack Lockerby, Captain Kook by Paul Cardin, Nythyhel by Tony Collins, Magnetic Moon by FSF Adventures and the perennial classic Book Of The Dead by The Essential Myth. What's more is that Into The Mystic is the only one-part game on the compilation, the others having two - and even three parts in the case of Magnetic Moon. The price for this enjoyable mixture of sci-fi and fantasy, text and graphical adventures? A mere £4.00. Add £1.00 extra to cover postage if you live outside the UK and make cheques payable to Glenda Collins. There are currently 18 titles in The Guild's software catalogue, and six of them are compilations. Prices for single games/tapes are £2.00 and compilations range from £3 - £4.00 each.

To celebrate the arrival of The Guild, Tony has generously knocked some money off a few of his titles, and the details are printed along with the coupons elsewhere on these very pages. In the meantime if you are desperate for more info on the complete range of adventures in The Guild catalogue then you can contact Tony at: The Guild, 760 Tyburn Road, Erdington, Birmingham B24 9NX and enclose an sae for their latest list of adventure goodies.

At 5:30pm (Galactic Mean Time) last Tuesday week, In a galaxy quite a fair bit out of the way... BUG WARS. It is a time of civil war. Rebel spies have managed to steal secret plans to the evil Galactic Empire's ultimate weapon... THE DREAD STAR! Princess Leea, hoping to return to her home planet Balderaan, is intercepted by a fearsome Star Bruiser! Captained by no less a dude tahn the Dark Lord of the farce himself... DAFT BUGGER!!!

So begins the opening passage of a truly stupendous graphic novel entitled Bug Wars. It's a spoof of the well known film with a similar title, and author and illustrator, Sean Doran, deserves to sell this masterpiece in its thousands. There's a good chance that Zenobi Software will be handling its distribution for around about the two quid mark. It's published in the popular A5 format and has 72 pages. Buy a copy now! If you send an sae requesting more info on Bug Wars to either Sean Doran, 14 Velsheda Court, Belfast BT14 7LZ, N. Ireland or to Zenobi Software, 26 Spotland Tops, Cutgate, Rochdale, Lancashire OL12 7NX, then you'll be sent more info, including the price.

Dave Wheatley of Rainbow Miniatures (whose 25mm fantasy figures were up for grabs in the Dec 91 issue of YS) has moved. Should you wish to contact him about purchasing any of his rather nice painted figures, which make ideal map markers, his address is: Fair View, Cherry Valley, Whithorn, Wigtownshire, Scotland DG8 8AB. His telephone number is: 09885 760. If you are writing to him for a price/product list then please enclose an sae.

GI GAMES

(8th Day titles) help-line.

As you will all undoubtedly know by now, GI Games have re-released a pile of extra-special golden oldie adventures. This is fantastic if you want to buy a lot of good older games – but what happens if you get stuck in them?

Have no fear... help-line is here! Here are a load of 'getting you started' nudges which will see you get going in the right direction on just about all of their re-releases. (Read the answers in traditional 'Ekim Drarreg' fashion – i.e. backwards and from right to left.)

THE MAPPER

By far the most popular Spectrum adventure writing utility nowadays must be Gilsoft's Professional Adventure Writer. The PAW (as it is commonly and affectionately abbreviated to) provides a very flexible framework to build on. It's normally used in a rather limited fashion, with many of its intricacies, functions and possibilities not being explored to the full. So, when a game like The Mapper comes along, what can a guy do except rave about it?

Despite being a Zenobi game The Mapper comes with rather more packaging than you're usually treated to. You get several sheets of info concerning some of the life forms, flora and fauna that you'll come across whilst exploring and mapping a sector of the planet Pollux 3. (What a funny name for a planet. Ed) This planet is 'potentially habitable'. Y'see, earth's suffered a serious baby-boom over the last few hundred years, so new planets have been targeted for colonisation.

You're a mapper and it's your job to map the 14x14 zone you've been allocated on Pollux 3. You've also got to collect specimens and data that may be of use to either you, or the boffins who are eager to see what lies on Pollux 3. Armed with a self recharging laser, knife and backpack you're ready for anything.

Once the game's loaded a series of display boxes appear. These form the front-end of a rather radical approach to adventure playing. Normally you would have found yourself staring at a screenful of text, but in The Mapper everything is controlled and displayed in, on, or near these display boxes.

The first thing to get to grips with is the area of the screen (a bordered box) that displays your current position on a small 3x3 map. Then you can start exploring. Travel, communication and progress in the game is achieved by typing in directions and issuing various commands. But that is where the similarity between this and most other adventures seems to end. My first (feeble) attempts at doing everyday, mundane things ended more often than not in sudden deaths. SDS (Sudden Death Syndrome) is normally a complete turn-off in any adventure though, for some reason, it's not so bad in this game. Maybe it's because your first priority is to map the game, so you can, to a large extent bypass the areas where you previously found yourself meeting yet another sticky and sudden end. The creatures tend to stay in distinct areas so, once you know where they live, you can normally avoid them.

The graphics are intelligently and sparingly used. There's a little detailed pic for each creature and plant and anything you're carrying.

After I'd been playing for a while it suddenly dawned on me that the only time a bit of 'lengthy' text appears is when you die or do something drastically wrong.

At first, much of the pleasure I got from the game came from the map making process itself. It wasn't 'til I reached a dead end that I began to realise what problems lie within the depths of the game. All the mapping you have to do would normally have sent me mad, but the game manages to combine just enough cartography with the right amount of problems. I've got a feeling that, despite its looks, the game will appeal to RPG-ers, text purists (even though there isn't a lot of text in it), strategy fans and graphic adventurers alike. I'm not overly keen on the fact that it's played in real-time, and that you also need to be accurate with the phrasing of certain commands at times. While I'm whining, there aren't too many helpful nudges or informative responses to your failed attempts at doing certain things.

One of the game's good points is that there's a rather wonderful Tutorial program on the B-side of the tape. This is an interactive guide to the adventure system used in The Mapper and will have you up and running in no time at all.

Phwoar! I'm as full as a full thing that's just been filled to the very top. That's pretty full, Spec-chums. I always overdo it at Christmas, I just can't help myself. Every year I say the same thing - "I'm not going to eat any chocolates or sweets or anything in between meals." And I can never do it! Every year I give in to temptation and stuff my face with every single sugary delight that's within reach. It's so hard not to when the tables are laden with Turkish Delight, sugared almonds and everything.s

After the christmas excess it's time to give up everything. New Year's resolutions, eh?

Doncha just hate 'em? Every New Year's Eve I make a really long list of the things that I think I should either take up or give up. If I follow this list, my life will be perfect and I'll grow another five inches. Then I decide that it's all a bit too much bother and I don't really want to grow anymore cos then none of my clothes would fit and all my skirts'd be far too short. So I give up on the resolutions and eat too many crisps and spend too much money on records. Ho hum! Here's some tips...

STACK UP

David Sanders is a Chap (with a capital 'c'). Not only has he written two completely stonking games (Stack Up for Zeppelin and Peking for our very own beloved cover cassette), he's also sent in some very helpful tips for Stack Up. Take it away, Dave...

- ★ If you're playing in black and white, choose the road signs set. It's the easiest to work with.
- ★ Clear each level as quickly as possible. The game speeds up through time, rather than through how many lines are made. After each round the speed goes down by one level.

- ★ A courage bonus is awarded for starting and finishing rounds three and five.
- ★ Get used to moving the blocks seperately from each other. When one lands, the others keep going and can still be moved and swopped as normal. With a bit of practise you can place them where you want. Don't land the middle one first by itself or you won't be able to move the other two.

- ★ Go for horizontal and diagonal, rather than vertical, lines if you can. Besides being worth the least points, a vertical line could leave you with a large trench or column that's difficult to get rid of. Also, remember that a chain reaction can never be started with a vertical line.

- ★ On the screens where they appear, black and random blocks occur at regular intervals. Random ones appear after every third block set and black ones every seventh block set. Try and anticipate these.

- ★ If you're playing with a joystick and you reach the rounds with reversed controls, simply turn your joystick upside down.

Gee, thanks Dave...

Hang on, I'm not finished yet! To access the cheat mode, get a high score on the full game (not the practise one) and enter BARR WARS as your name. When the continue option appears you'll have 99 credits to play with.

Barr Wars, eh? Funny name that. But I suppose stranger things happen at sea.

SEYMOUR GOES TO HOLLYWOOD

Lor' luvvavuduck, it's Leigh Loveday. He's been a bit quiet recently but now he's back with a Megamap and a complete solution to the Codies' Seymour Goes To Hollywood. You've all seen Seymour: Take One (if you haven't - it was on the covertape last month. Why not grab yourself an issue from Back Issues over on page 49?) and this is about the same lovable slug. According to Richard Eddy at CodeMasters, Seymour isn't a slug at all but a sweet, cuddly little thing. Pih! He's a slug. Take it away, Leigh...

SEYMOUR GOES TO HOLLYWOOD THE COMPLETE SOLUTION

That was the map, here's the complete solution...

Time your way past the choppers and get heart. out, L, R, in, drop stuff and take snack, pump and balloon R to the village. Take snack up to hut E and lure parrot out by dropping snack so that it flies to it. Lure it L and into hut F, get dagger and key e. D, drop stuff, take balloon and pump to riverbank and use them. Avoid fire in balloon and, when across, enter hut, get gloves and key f. Go out, take gloves, key f, flowers and arm back across the river one at a time. You'll have to hold the pump and balloon as well. Take everything back to base, take key c and go Lx4.

Open door, enter Sherlock set, use gloves to pick up one dollar and cards. Leave set, in, R, in, in, drop stuff, back L, Lx3 to get other two dollars. Back in, R, in, in to base, drop, take keys e and f left, L, open door and enter Rick set.

Get warrant, take lift D, get body, U, L, out, R, in, drop, take key e L. Go R, open door and enter Country set. Get arm, out, back in, in to base, pick up warrant, cards and a dollar with gloves. Do this by picking up the gloves first so that you can drop after you pick up the last item. Take warrant, dollar and cards L, R, enter set, R, into saloon, R, arrest cowboy, take stuff back L out of set, back left, in, enter Rick set. R, lift U, L, give evidence to Rick, get gunpowder, back out of set, back R, into base, drop, L, R.

Enter Country set, R, into saloon, R, U stairs, L, through middle door, talk to Sal, get love letter and go all the way back out of the set. L, in, enter Rick set, R, U, L, give letter to Rick, get lollipop, R into base. Take lollipop and a dollar in, L all the way to the road, cross road, get foot, into Greasy Lil's and buy buttie. Take lollipop, buttie, foot and key g back R across road to base. Drop, take key g and ball L, R, open door and enter Frank set. Give ball to Towser, L, U, L, D and get key h. Back U and R out of set, L, in, in, take only key g and go Lx3. Open door, back in, R, into base, take mallet, buttie and dagger Lx3.

Enter Kong set, hit barrels on your way to the top, give buttie to Kong, cut maiden's ropes with dagger, get medal, back D and out. In, R, into base, take all bits of Frankenstein (head, body, arms, legs, hands, feet) and gloves and dollar. This'll take about four return trips. Go L, R, R to Frank set, enter Frank set and drop all the bits under the table. Put dollar in meter, make sure you've got gloves on and pull both switches, pull them back when Frank's alive, go R through gap, get brain, R and out. L, in, into base, take brain, heart and medal L and enter Oz set.

Follow set around and give everything to Dorothy. Get towel, out into base, take towel and potion L, L, in, enter Flash set, U to teleport. Drop towel in front of teleport and then flick the switch on the terminal. Don't teleport yourself until the towel's gone. When teleported go R, U in lift, L past Ming without stopping (you'll turn visible). Get detonator, back R, teleport back, out of set, L, R, into base, take flowers, detonator and gunpowder in and left through offices. Give flowers to Pippa, get key, R to lift, U to top floor, L, open red door, enter office, drop gunpowder by safe. Go out and use detonator, back in, get script and that's it.

Oh, apart from the fact that you now need 16 actors. So you've got to find all the Oscars, I can only find 13 of them after many hours of eyestrain and expostulations. Take an Oscar and a script to every character in the whole game. That includes Pippa, the doorman, Greasy Lil, Tarzan, the biker, Sindy, captain Beady, King Kong, the maiden, Ming, Frank Einstein, the cowboy, Rick Bracey, Sal, Dorothy and the corpse. That's all. Go to it!

PRACTICAL POKES

I'm a person, not a number. See! I've got a zit! JON NORTH tells it like

A few of you wrote in asking why I've never had my photo published. My usual reply is the embarrassingly unoriginal "I don't like cameras", but if the truth be told, I've got a zit on my forehead which I don't want to show the world.

CLINIC

Got a gamesnag? See a specialist!

Ah, that looks nasty. Very nasty. Nurse, fetch my surgical implements. The very blunt ones.

ROBOCOP 2

First under the knife – stop screaming, for Pete's sake – is Christopher Key, who couldn't find the lift switch on Level Two of this mildly disappointing film tie-in. "Why bother looking?" I helpfully replied. But Richard Caine has applied his giant brain to this question (Are you sure that shouldn't be 'brain'? Ed), and Brian has come up with this. (Sorry. Ed)

"From the start, go right destroying any crates and killing bad guys until you reach the door. Go through and then back through again. If you get killed now, you will start from this door and not the beginning. Go left and jump onto the first conveyor belt, then onto the one above it. When you reach the end of this, jump onto the belt to the right, then up to the one above. At the end of this, jump straight up onto the ledge. Up again, across the gap and onto the next ledge. Face to the right, straight up twice, then jump right, and then straight up twice again. Jump up and right twice, and you should find yourself on the top conveyor. Jump off the end and you'll fall onto yet another belt. Jump right, over the gaps and then right off the last belt onto solid ground. Walk right a little way until you see a switch on the back wall. Shoot it once to activate all the lifts. To get back, just go along the bottom conveyors. I hope this helps!"

Yes, me too, Richard. Thanks also to Jonathan Fitt on that answer. In fact, Richard goes on to remind me that his boffo tip for Mercenary in the same ish (71) about the triangular doors only works for The Second City, and to ask a question of his own, to wit: "Does anyone know a way to stop the brill Kwik Snax crashing after 80,000 points? Haylp!" Any ideas, Clinicians?

RENEGADE

Level Three's Big Bertha was the problem here for Robert Stone. Apparently he often has run-ins with females of what might be described as substantial proportions.

Hey, Robert, this is a family show! Still, Gareth Surgenor knows what's what, who's who, and when's why's wherefore, which probably takes a bit of practice. Gareth?

"Right, Big Bertha. First

kill all the teeny ladies until Big Bertha moves out of her hidey hole. If she is on your right, then move down and left until you hit the bottom of the screen. Move to the bottom right if she's on your left. Keep on moving backwards until she hits the bottom. Stop – she'll run at you now. When she's about 3-5cm away, jump-kick her face and she'll fall. If you're on the bottom left, now move to the top right and again continue going backwards 'til she runs, when you promptly kick her in the face. Carry on doing this until she hits the floor for the last time and – ta da, you've done it.

By the way, on the next level, the boss has a gun, so watch for the bullets. Get as close to him as you can and he won't shoot, only kick and punch." Oh, well that's all right then. (Oof!)

BLINKY'S SCARY SCHOOL

Crazy name, crazy game. Being driven crazy by it all is our old chum Daz Ellis. Daz can get to the room where it's completely black, but can't jump over the gap to get the torch. Step forward the fearless Alan McDonald, who proffers this excellent advice:

"Walk right until Blinky falls off the first platform, and the second he lands on the second platform, jump right. You should have jumped over the gap!"

Top hole and spiff-ho, as my old grandma used to say after the shipping forecast. Badge on the way, Alan...

CHUBBY GRISTLE

Ah, you were wondering where Richard Swann was, weren't you? He's a bit cross with me this month (for calling him Dicky again, probably) and asks "Do you ever read the 'gossip' that appears at the start of my letters?" Of course I do, Richard, it's just the rest of it I don't bother with. Ha! Ha! Ha! Still, he knows the answer to Mr J "Formal" Turner's gamesnag, for "Formal" had collected all the food, arrived at Greasy Joe's and eaten everything there. Not surprisingly, he wanted to know what to do next. "Go to the 'weigh-in' room," suggests the Swann, "where, provided you've eaten everything, you'll break the weighing machine and explode from overweight!" Hmm, delicious. More stuff from Richard, I suspect, next month.

HAYLP!

A quick snatch of snags to keep you going:

Richard Mitton: "In The Happiest Days Of Your Life, what do you do with the passage key, and is there anything in the headmaster's study?"

Alex Marsh: "How do you get into the yellow grass in Slightly Magic?"

Carole Johnson: "In Supercom, what's the Level Two code for the computer Armageddon and where can I find it?"

Harry Frith: "In Marsport, I'm stranded in the third games room on Tarr level, Sector G. Where's the key to open the exit door to Sector C?"

Remember, send all your snags, tips, solutions, biscuits and old yogurt pots to Dr B's Clinic, YS, 30 Monmouth Street, Bath BA1 2BW. I'll be waiting by the letter box. Yowsah!

SPEC TEC

No case is too tough for Spec Tec, apart from the mystery of the missing wig, that is...

I've been called to the scene of the crime this month readers and it's a pretty tough nut to crack. It's an important case, though, and I stand to make lots of moolah if I can solve it.

Someone broke into the City Hall and stole the Mayor's wig. He's bald as a coot and refuses to go outside without it firmly stuck on his bonce.

But how did they get in? I just can't figure it out. I wish somebody would get that window fixed, it's getting kind of chilly in here, and somebody could get hurt on all that broken glass.

And what's the reason behind the crime? What would anyone stand to gain from stealing the Mayor's wig? I wish they'd keep the noise down outside, I can hardly think. It's election day and all the candidates are riding around with loud-hailers. All except the Mayor of course!

Just look at them. There's Jones, from the opposition in his open-topped Limo. Hmm, I wonder why he's got that funny-looking cat on the seat next to him. Must be some sort of mascot, I s'pose...

RESET YOURSELF

I want to put a reset switch in my old Speccy but the problem is I don't want one that cuts the power supply. The reason for this is because I have a +D interface which stores its DOS in its RAM. So I'd need to load it in again every time I reset the Speccy. I also have a +2 and the reset switch on that operates leaving the DOS intact.

I did some research and found out that pin 26 of the Z80 is the reset input for the CPU and that if set too low it will set the program counter to zero. Would it be possible to connect it to the 0 volt input of the Z80 with a push button switch so that it will operate like a +2 input switch? I would be most grateful for any help you can give.

Michael Tang
Leicester

That's exactly how the +2's switch is wired up, by pulling the reset line to zero volts. However, if you're to attempt the modification yourself, be careful. If you're not, you could end up with one dead Speccy. Ad.

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

I'm just about to finish my own game but I need to add a few finishing touches. First I saw how to do a high score table in machine code, but how do you do one in BASIC and keep the scores in memory? And how can I put a cheat in my program - again in BASIC? I tried this at the start of the game. You enter the name like this:

20 INPUT "Enter your name: ";a$ 30 IF a$="CHEAT" THEN LET lives=99
```

But it doesn't work! Please help me!
Darren Wells
Sutton-on-Trent, Notts

Make sure that you're not resetting the lives to the normal amount after the cheat. Set the lives before you check for a cheat, so modify line 30 to read:

30 LET lives=3: IF a$="CHEAT" THEN
LET lives=99

Get rid of any other line that sets the number of lives you have.

For a high score table you need to write a little routine that compares the score with the highest scores so far, and inserts it into the proper place in the list. Something, in fact, a little like this:

10 DIM h$(5,10):DIM h(10): REM Save space for five high scores, each up to 10 characters in length

...Your game goes here...

1000 REM High score subroutine. a$ contains the player's name, score is their score.
```

1010 FOR x=1 TO 5

1020 IF score > h(x) THEN GOTO 1050
```

1030 NEXT x

1040 RETURN: REM No high score!

1050 FOR y=5 TO X STEP-1: REM We have a high score. First shuffle everything else down

PLAY THE GAME

I am about half way through learning BASIC. I know enough to make some types of game, but pokes are beyond me so I use other people's.

I need to know how to get the music to play while the computer gets on with something else. I also need to know how to save a game keeping the variables at whatever point they are. I can save a game mid-way, but not the variables.

You wrote in the July issue that there are 21 UDGs. My manual says that there are only 19; 'A' to 'S'. I own a Speccy+2.

A Greenwood
Accrington, Lancs

Although the Plus machines have the facility to output sound using the built-in sound chip, they can't play music while the computer gets on with other things, such as controlling the game. This is a pity cos the sound chip is more than capable of looking after itself.

The only way (I know of) to get the computer to play music and do other things at the same time from BASIC is to play the tune one note at a time through the program's main game loop.

Each note has to be played very quickly so it doesn't slow the computer down too much. As long as the game itself runs quite quickly it can sound reasonably OK, but by no means terrific.

This said, I think that the only real way round the problem is to resort to machine code. What you really need is an interrupt-driven music driver program that sends data to the sound chip without having to wait while it plays the sound. Unfortunately, I haven't got one. But if anyone has come up with a short program that can be used from BASIC, I'm sure we could come to some arrangement with regard to an extra-special Special Investigation prize!

Saving a program to tape automatically saves all the variables with it. Be careful though, and make sure you don't RUN a program whose variables you want to keep.

TAXING TOUGHIES TACKLED

TOTAL RECALL

In the October ish there was a request for a 48K program to recall a screen from memory. There is a simpler method to the one you printed for 128K users.

Built into the Plus computers is a RAM disk that can be used to store screens, code or BASIC programs. This is a good place to temporarily 'hide' screens:

10 LOAD "filename" SCREEN$ :REM
Load the screen
20 SAVE "m:filename" SCREEN$
30 CLS
40 PAUSE 0: REM Wait for a key press
50 LOAD "m:filename" SCREEN$
```

This saves the screen to the RAM disk and then loads it back again. You can get rid of the file with ERASE "m:filename".

Thanks, Ian. You may find something 'appearing' on your doormat soon! Ad.

DETECTIVE WORK

In Y572 you asked whether there was a way to detect whether a Spectrum was in 48K mode or not. There are two ways to do this. The first, very simply, checks the ROM; there are a few differences between 48K and 128K Spectrums:

IF PEEK 5440=65 THEN PRINT "This is a 128K Spectrum"

IF PEEK 5440=83 THEN PRINT "This is
```

Unfortunately this routine returns a 128K result on a 128K machine in 48K mode. However, we can get round that using the second method that you explained by using the 128K memory banks. We must, however, make sure that the stack is not in the banked memory, between addresses 49152 and 65535.

```
10 CLEAR 49151
20 POKE 49152,1:POKE
23388,17:POKE 49152,0:POKE 23388,16
30 IF PEEK 49152=1 THEN GOTO 100
40 IF PEEK 49152=0 THEN GOTO 200
100 REM put 128K routines here...
200 REM put 48K routines here...

This routine should work at any time, but bear in mind that the byte that was at address 49152 will be lost.

Secondly, I'm afraid that the tips for disabling the EDIT key by John White do not work on either a Spectrum +2 or a rubber-keyed 48K Speccy. Fortunately I have discovered an alternative form of program protection, namely a way to hide BASIC programs.

The following routines only work in 48K, and cannot hide a program in 128K mode. (You can use POKE 23386,0 to make the program crash if you're in 128K mode.) Enter the first line with a line number below 256 and type:

POKE 23755,255
```

The program will disappear! You can make it reappear again with:

If you use this method in your BASIC program, the program will run, but will stop after any GOTO, GOSUB or RETURN statements. To get round this, temporarily disable the hiding routine (POKE 23755,0).

ON TAPE

I've just read Spec Tec in the December issue of YS and came across a letter from D W Harding concerning an external tape deck for his +2A. I have a +2, but think this applies to both machines.

Disconnect everything from the computer and undo the screws to open the machine. Inside there is a white connector which houses 5 wires. The black and red wires take power to the deck, the blue wire is the ear signal (load) and goes to the tip of a plug connected to the ear socket on the external tape deck. The white wire is to the mic signal (save) and goes to the tip of a plug connected to the mic socket on the external tape deck. The brown wire is the signal earth and goes to the base of both plugs.

I use a stereo jack plug with two colour-coded mono plugs coming from it and a stereo socket with all leads inside fitted to a hole drilled in the side. (This is the same as the +3.) It works perfectly.

You have to disconnect the plug when you want to use the built-in deck. Be warned though: this will invalidate your guarantee and I won't take responsibility for any damage caused through wrongly disconnected wires!

A Park
Andover, Hants

Thanks for another Special Investigation solved!

If your computer is still under guarantee, then I suggest you get the internal tape deck fixed rather than making holes in the side of your Speccy! Ad.

Y'see, this command clears them all. If you want to save the game to continue at a certain point, following the filename with the LINE command does this. Alternatively, when reloaded, the program will continue immediately after the line it was saved at. Like this:

1000 SAVE "program" LINE 100:
REM When loaded, program will start from line 100, with all variables intact
```

1000 SAVE "program"
1010 REM When loaded, the program will continue from here with all variables intact
```

You can also save arrays separately to tape, which is great for saving things like high scores without having to dump the whole program to tape. If you wanted to save everything in the 'h' array you'd use the format:

SAVE "filename" DATA h ()

If you want to save all the information about the current state of play onto tape, such as lives, score and whatever, one way to do it would be to copy all the information into an array, save that to tape. When you reload it, you can then copy all the info from the array back into the variables.

There are 21 user-defined graphics, but only in 48K mode. In 128K mode you lose 2 UDGs to make way for a couple of extra commands, PLAY and SPECTRUM. It's a bit of a bodge job, really. Ad.

STOP IT

I have a Speccy +3 and I also have a very horrible brother who keeps breaking into my programs and messing them up. I know that you can poke the 'break' key to make the computer crash when it's pressed, but how can I stop the 'stop' statement from working?

I would be grateful for any help you can give me.

Mark Fleming
Kirkcaldy, Fife

I suggest you take the problem by the horns. Tackle it at its roots, Mark. What's the real problem – your brother, that's what. I know a guy, "Crusher" Mahoney, who can sort out your problem once and for all...

But if that will get you in trouble with your Mum, then maybe just preventing 'stop' from working isn't a bad idea. I'm sure that there was a way, but I can't remember how. Tell you what, if anyone knows how, there'll be a handsome prize in the post! Ad.

JUST A NOTE

I'm a keen musician and I own a Speccy +3 with a Yamaha PSS 680 keyboard. It mentions in the manual putting the letter 'Y' before the notes in a PLAY statement to send it to the keyboard. Please could you clearly explain how I could build a lead for this purpose as I'm unsure how to build one because I don't have a wiring diagram. I only know that it has to have an RS232 to go into the Speccy and a DIN connector to go into the MIDI IN on the keyboard. Help!

Speccy +3 owners may be interested to know that I've discovered a couple of things which are weird! Type COPY RANDOMIZE and press ENTER. Before the Speccy has time to realise you've made an error by going 'beep', immediately hold down the keys 'Z', 'C', 'P' and 'L', and the Speccy greets you with a message. Brill, eh?

Craig Daines
Yapton, West Sussex

The RS232 socket on the back of the Speccy doubles up as a MIDI OUT socket too. You will need to construct a cable with a Telecom-style plug on one end, and a 5-pin DIN plug on the other. The lead should be wired as follows. Ad.

FOND OF RUBBER

I need some advice. For the last 8 years or so I have owned a Spectrum computer of some description. I fondly remember those rubber keys, but the need to upgrade came.

My main reason for the purchase of my new Speccy +2A was for the better quality of the keyboard. I want to use the Speccy as a word processor. Up until now I have been managing with an electronic typewriter, put as it's a typewriter/printer, why not take advantage of word processing facilities?

Thus, my questions are:

● Would Tasword +2 and a Datel Inter Printer work with my Panasonic KXR193 typewriter? (It has a parallel interface adaptor.)

● I was extremely disappointed to find that the +2A keyboard is smaller than the industry standard keyboard. The thought came into my mind that the keyboard may not be as durable as I was lead to believe. Am I correct?

● As my computer takes up valuable space on my desk, it is relegated to sitting on top of my telly when not in use. Is this safe?

K Hunt
Croespenmaen, Gwent

Glad to see you're still faithful to the cause.

● As long as the typewriter has a Centronics parallel interface (and it should do; it's the industry standard) then you should be able to use it directly linked to the Speccy. There's no need for an extra printer interface, as the +2 has one already built in. All you'll need is a cable to connect the two together which should be available with locally or through the adverts in YS. Tasword +2 is a fine choice for a word processor.

● The +2 keyboard is quite small, but should be able to take a fair pounding before it gets worn out.

● You shouldn't put anything magnetic on top of a telly as it can distort the picture. I don't think it will do any serious harm, though. Ad.

GETTING INTO PRINT

I need your help urgently. I am a student at a secondary school in Sheffield and am moving into the 5th year. I can't bear to be away from my Speccy for too long so help me by answering the following questions:

● How much is a printer for a +2?

● Is it worth paying the extra for colour?

● How do you print from the Speccy to the printer?

● How the heck do you get a program to run automatically when you load it instead of having to type 'RUN'?

● Why doesn't Andy give you a rise?

Andrew Cain
Sheffield

● Printers start at around £130 for a very basic model, but can cost many times that.

● Depends what you're going to do with it. If all you want to do is print out letters, then no, it's not.

However, if you're a bit of a dab hand with art packages, then you'll have the luxury of being to print out in colour.

● Easy! The LPRINT command sends text to the printer in the same way as the PRINT command does on screen. If you would like a listing of your program printed out then use the LLIST command.

● You get the Spectrum to automatically run from any line on your program. Say you wanted it to run from line 10 you would save the program as follows:

SAVE "program" LINE 10

● Good idea! I'll ask him:

Andy: "Yo, Ad my man."

Me: "Been a long time, Andy. And I think it's time you showed a little gratitude. I'm talking about my rate."

Andy: "You're unbelievable!"

Hmmm, I don't think that went down too well. Ad.

SAVE YOURSELF

Could you help me by telling me how to save something onto disk using a +3. I've tried everything, I've looked in the book and done everything they said. I buy your magazine every time it comes out but it's never told me how to save something.

Gareth Wilson
Huntingdon, Cambs

Before a disk can be used you will first have to format it. This sets up the disk and makes it ready to be able to hold information that the computer can read or write to. Use the command:

Format "a:"

Programs can then be saved with:

SAVE "filename"

It's as simple as that!

YOU KNOW WHERE TO FIND ME

I've been racking my brains for hours and I just can't figure it out! What I'd give for one solitary clue! I'm obviously up against a very clever and mysterious crime organisation.

What's this? Ah, the Mayor. Oh, apparently I'm off the case. He lost the election to Jones and so can't afford to pay me. Pity, he was a damn fine chap.

But that leaves me with (ahem) a little cash-flow problem of my own. Looks like I'm going to have to rely on another sackful of your problems to sort out, to get me by for another month.

The address is Adam Waring, Spec Tec, Your Sinclair, Future Publishing, 30 Monmouth Street, Bath BA1 2BW.

Don't enclose SAEs with your letters, though. I'm a hard working guy and don't have the time to reply personally to your problems! Sorry and all that.

CodeMasters/£3.99 cass

Oh dear. CodeMasters have gone funny again. Not content with fiddling around with slugs and eggs, they've gone and got themselves involved in time tunnels. You'd think they'd know better, wouldn't you?

The time tunnel they've just started mucking around with has apparently whisked a caveman called Big Nose from pre-historic times to Manhattan in the twentieth century.

As well as the Cro-Magnon dude, there are also loads of ancient style animals trapped in the present day. Big Nose has got to travel along loads of platforms to rescue them and, along the way, there's fires, policemen and bombs to avoid.

It all sounds slightly implausible, especially if you're old enough to remember those Jackanory stories about Little Nose and Big Nose (two cavemen, incidentally), told by a Scottish guy with a massive sweater and an equally massive beard.

Anyway, as you rush around the platforms, you having to keep jabbing away at the fire button cos the place is crawling with things that keep trying to destroy you. To get maximum fire you've got to keep flicking the fire button as quickly as possible, you can't just hold down the button. This gets a tad tricky when you're close to the edge of a screen and you've got to move onto a new screen which might just be covered with nasties.

Some of the jumps demand split second timing. Others demand £100,000 in used notes and a helicopter to Brazil.

All this jumping, running and blasting will take it out of you, so you've got to collect burgers and milk-shakes whenever you can. They give you energy, as do the beer mugs you occasionally bump into. But be careful because drinking the beer reverses your left and right keys. I suppose it's meant to represent getting drunk. You can still play on, but you'll need to think about what you're doing. Nice touch, Codies!

Unlike many platform games, you can't fall to your death cos you just land on whatever happens to be below you, and walk off. You can also steer while you're in the air, so that makes things much easier.

Sound and graphics in Big Nose are pretty much what you'd expect from a good Codies' game. You know the kind of thing - nice big sprites and diddeley-doo musak. So there's no reason to complain. (Well there is, actually. You could complain about the colour of the cassette or the hole in the ozone layer or the inadequate parking facilities in Utttoxeter. But we know how to deal with people like you, farty.)

So if you're in the market for a platform game starring someone who should have been dead thousands of years ago, rush along to your chemist and order a copy of Big Nose on the NHS. ☺

Big Nose waits for a grilled burger. The burger gives him energy, but the flames will roast his little bot if he gets too close.

SPECCY GAMES

OF ALL TIME pt 5

In which we finally reach the absolute zenith of ten years of the Speccy gaming industry - the best game ever. There's really no more to be said.

1 DEATH CHASE

(Micromega)

No apologies, no regrets. Y'see, Spec-chums, I've been playing computer games for as long as computer games have existed. I've played thousands of them, from coin-op games to ZX81 games to Apple Macintosh games and all points in between. And the simple fact of the matter is that there isn't one in existence that's as exciting, as gripping, as tense, or as downright thrilling as this is. Written in 1983 in just 9K of memory, Deathchase puts you on a motorbike in a forest, with no purpose in life other than to chase other characters on motorbikes and kill them for bounty money. Your enemies don't shoot back at you (not even the bonus-point tanks and helicopters), there are no power-ups, no end-of-level bosses, and the only things which can kill you are the trees of the forest itself. They don't TRY to kill you, of course, they just stand there, growing leaves and photosynthesising and doing whatever it is that trees do over the countless millennia, and wait for you to crash headlong into them at full tilt. And you will. The inanimate nature of your only enemy gives Deathchase addictive qualities which are almost unimaginable to anyone who hasn't played it. Y'see, when you get killed in Deathchase, it's nobody's fault but your own. The trees don't move, nothing shoots at you to distract you and you can even slow down or stop to catch your breath. Basically, there's absolutely Ooh! Night-time is spooky in the forest. You can still see the wood for the trees, though. no excuse for getting yourself splattered all over the forest except your own carelessness and impatience. Which means, of course, that the next time you play, you won't make any of those silly mistakes. Will you? Well, of course you will. The thing is, the game is so utterly simple (I mean, 'avoid the trees', it's almost insulting) that you don't see any reason to slow down, you can't accept that your skills as a games player aren't equal to such a laughably straightforward task. So off you go at top speed again, whizzing through the forest in fine dramatic style until you remember that you've got enemies to chase. So you swerve after them with your bullets zipping past just centimetres away, edge just that bit further over to get them into your sights, and BLAM! Another faceful of bark.

There's more to Deathchase than this, but not much more (as a wise man once said, more or less). For one thing there's the sound. Not that there's a lot of it, all you get is a scary siren effect at the start of each level and a jarring screech when you collide with one of those ubiquitous giant redwoods. The result, though, is so effective you wonder why no-one does it more often. The silence as you whip soundlessly between the trees just makes the sudden explosion of noise all the more terrifying - this is a game that'll make you jump off your seat in fright if you play it at night with the lights off. And that reminds me - there's night time too.

Every second level of Deathchase is a night level, with the same number of trees as the previous one but with the light blue sky turned pitch black. Theoretically it shouldn't make things any harder, but the atmosphere is so gloomy and oppressive that you find yourself crashing almost on purpose out of sheer subconscious despair. The coming of dawn (when you finally manage to nail the level's two bikers) heralds an increased level of danger, but the relief of being back in daylight is so great that you almost welcome it.

Finally there are the 'bonuses'. Every now and again a tank or helicopter cruises slowly across the horizon from left to right. They don't shoot at you, they don't get in your way, they don't drop reinforcements for the bad guys, they don't do you any harm at all in any way. Except that sometimes they're just too much of a sitting target to pass up, and you deviate from your path for a single second to bag the juicy points bonus you get for shooting them, and... BLAM! Time to leave your teethmarks for posterity once more. They never hurt you, but you'll grow to hate them.

Doesn't sound like much, does it? Bikes, trees, bonus targets and crashing. (Lots of crashing.) Only two real controls, hardly any sound, totally basic character-square graphics and gameplay your dog could probably learn. I'm probably talking rubbish, all those years in front of flickering screens have probably destroyed my mind. It can't be that good really. So why not prove me wrong? Why don't you give it a try? What have you got to lose? Except the rest of your life, that is...

It's not speed that kills, it's hitting a tree!

PROGRAM PITSTOP

All JONATHAN DAVIES ever wanted was a Barbie-mobile. He didn't get one this year, so he's living in hope. Meanwhile, he'll make do with a few lists...

If you're a Spectrum owner who likes living life in the fast lane, who seeks the adrenalin-pumping thrills that only typing in listings can provide, who wants to be a hit at parties and attract lots of members of the opposite sex, you've turned to the right page.

And boy, have I got a line-up for you this month. (I had to check twice, but I have.) For starters there's - wait for it - a message scroller from Andrew Hunt. Then there's - gasp - a musical program from Darren Bloggs. And finally - swoon - a 'patch' for Draw It, your YS art utility.

ROCK AND SCROLL

by Andrew Hunt

I'm afraid your eyes don't deceive you: here's yet another message scroller. "But why?" you cry. "We've been faithfully typing in Pitstop scrollers for years, and we're up to our nostrils in the things. Our eyes have developed a permanent list to the left from watching messages scroll past. The last, the very last, thing we want right now is another scroller. Take it away. Cast it thither."

But have patience, please. Andrew Hunt's scroller is different. Okay, it's not that different, but it is remarkably short. It also scrolls messages which are a whole screen high, exceedingly smoothly and in a colour of your choosing. You can't say fairer than that.

Getting the thing up and running shouldn't take long. Just type in the BASIC section and save it with SAVE "scroller" LINE 9999. Then turf out a copy of the Hexloader from a previous YS and use it to enter the hex section. Save that as "code". Then reload and run.

Most of the BASIC listing is taken up by a demo, and an explanation of how it works. That saves me having to go through it all, as you should be able to work out how to replace Mark's message with your own without any trouble at all.

SPEC SCHOOL

DAVE

Remember how you conned your mum and dad into getting you a Speccy? "I won't just play games on it, honest, mum! Computers are an essential part of the modern world, and you wouldn't want me growing up deprived and technologically backwards, would you?"

And ever since it's been one long round of blasting, leaping, joystick-wagging and generally mind-rotting your-mother-wouldn't-like-it fun!

So, just to keep 'em from whingeing about you wasting your life, why not check out a couple of educational programs (said through gritted teeth). No, honest, they're not as bad as they sound.

The bunch reviewed here are all for under-eights, so for most of you they'll only be any good if you've got a kid brother or sister. Still, they'll keep your mum happy and keep little Johnny from using your Kylie records as frisbees. That's if you trust him with your Speccy, of course!

Picture Book

Triple R Education/£12.95 cass

A is for apple and B is for books are blimmin' borin'. Turning over pages is such a drag, and the pictures are so, well, static. Could Picture Book, a four-program package that aims to file traditional paper picture books next to Bros, as a thing of the past, be the answer?

The main program is Alphabet Book, and is basically an animated picture book. There're 26 pics, which is handy as each of them is of an object starting with a different letter. You type in a letter on the keyboard and a piccie of an object that starts with that letter pops up on screen, along with its name. The advantage it has over traditional picture books is that the piccies are animated – the sails on the windmill go around, the apple has two great chunks taken out of it, that sort of thing.

According to the packaging the graphics were designed by a bloke with a degree. What did he get his degree in, crapness? It certainly wasn't in designing Speccy graphics. Look up blocky in a dictionary and the definition will probably say, "Check out Picture Book on the Spectrum." Colourful, yes. Distinguishable, no. The eggs looks like disembodied eyeballs.

The other three games all make use of the same 26 pictures, worse luck. Snap is based on the traditional card game. Up to three players can take part. All it involves is the computer displaying two pictures and if they're the same you have to press your allotted key on the keyboard before anyone else. A bit dull if you play on your own, with two or three people it can get quite frantic, and quite good fun.

There are three levels. In level one you just have to match pictures. This is handy as you don't have to know what the object is supposed to be – if two orange blobs come up on-screen then you know they're supposed to be a match. In levels two and three you have to match a word with the object.

In Count 'Em you have to, um, count 'em... A number of objects appear on screen and you have to tot 'em up and type in the number on your keyboard. Simple enough, but it makes good use of colour and there's a brill farty sound when you get the answer wrong.

In Spell It you have to, um, spell the name of the object pops up on screen (lots of thought went into the titles here). A nifty screen layout, bold colours and big bright text spruce things up no end.

Picture also comes with what the packaging proudly boasts to be 'revolutionary keyboard overlays'. Are they telepathic? Do they tell you when Neighbours is on the telly? Nope, they are just little polythene things that have the letters printed in lower case and in alphabetical order. Wow.

Picture Book is dead easy to use – a four year old could hack it which is lucky since that's who it's aimed

Count And Add Lander £???.??

Maths is crap and Count and Add tries hard, but fails, to liven things up.

Maths! Universally hated by all schoolkids (except the weird nerdy ones who don't count anyway because they're not normal). But don't worry, 'cos Count and Add is certainly a better introduction to numbers than being taught by a teacher who looks like Freddy Krueger and is twice as deadly with a piece of chalk.

There are five games here, though they're all pretty much variations on a theme. Even the graphical layout is much the same in all of them. In Sets 1, a number of things appear on screen and you have to count them. In Sets 2 you are told how many things there are supposed to be and you have to tap the space bar to reveal them.

OK, the names of the games aren't exactly exciting, but Picture Book's not bad.

Fun School 4 - Under 5s

Europress Software £12.99 cass
£16.99 disk

The acclaimed Fun School series teaches kids all about such loathsome things as spelling and maths so painlessly that they hardly notice that it's doing them good. The latest Under 5s package has six games all featuring various members of the Teddy family, who all just happen to be bears.

Apparently, Addition is set in a nursery school, but it looks suspiciously like a normal school to me. There's a blackboard, a teacher and, worse of all, simple addition sums to be done. Still, if you get them right, you're allowed to go home early, hurrah!

Fun Train is all about matching pictures and words. One of the Teddies drives a train past a poster showing a picture or word. The train carries another picture or word in its tender. If they match, press the space bar and feel very proud of yourself. Nice concept, and nice graphics, even if the same pictures do keep cropping up over and over again.

Teddy's House is a fun painting program. In the lower levels you just paint the Teddies' house in whatever colour scheme you fancy. On higher levels the computer asks you to paint specific parts of the house in certain colours. It all gets loads more difficult when the names of the colours are taken away - a bit of a toughie.

Teddy D's Karaoke is a work of sheer genius. MC Teddy struts his funky stuff to the hits of the nursery; The Grand Old Duke Of York, Jack and Jill, they're all here. Your Speccy plays the tune and displays the words so that you can sing while Teddy D grooves. Great stuff. On Level Two you can hit the space bar really fast and watch Teddy D rock.

Then there's Teddy's Book, in which you have to work out which bed-time storybook daddy Teddy is reading to his cubs. Finally, Teddy Paint is a not-much-fun paint program that lets the collection down a bit.

Otherwise it's a brilliant disk with appealing characters, effective use of colour and spiffy sound fx. The only problem'll be prising your kid brother or sister away from the keyboard when you want to get back to Dizzy. ☺

Fun School 4

5 to 7 year olds

Europress Software £12.99 cass
£16.99 disk

Animals is virtually the same as Sets 1 but they try to trick you into thinking otherwise by dotting the animals all around the screen instead of lining them up neatly and having a bone to climb a ladder each time you get an answer correct (I'm not sure if there's some deep message to this imagery).

Train is where the real work starts. Yep, it's time to add things up (shudder!) If you're successful, a train chuffs its way along the top of the screen.

Spider sees you having to rescue a Butterfly from a hungry arachnid using your mathematical prowess. If you get a fairly simple sum right the butterfly moves further away from the ever-approaching spider.

None of the games are exactly engrossing, and are not helped by some really dull graphics - they're little more than black and white line drawings on wishy-washy coloured backgrounds. The reaction time is sluggish to the point of Jeremy Beadle-type irritation. Still, the sound is excellent, and the little celebratory jingle you get if you get all the answers in a section right is almost worth playing the games for. ☺

Fun School for the more mature little Spec-chum. The linking character here is Freddy the Frog - I mean, at five you're just too old for Teddies, aren't you? (Unless you're James, of course.)

Best of the six games here is Typing which features a dopey-looking crocodile who's hot on Freddy's tail. You can save Freddy by typing in certain letters, words or sentences. Type them correctly and Freddy hops hurriedly out of the range of the crocodile's teeth. Finally he reaches an island where someone has left a hefty-looking mallet. And guess what you use that for? All the crocodile-bashing happens off screen, but the great graphics and wicked sense of humour make this an excellent little game.

In Opposites Freddy and his wife want to go swimming, but the farmer who owns the pool will only let them if they answers questions about opposites. The pool is covered with lily pads, some of which have words on. The computer gives you another word, small for example, and you have to guide Freddy to the lily pad that says tall. When you've got a certain amount right Mrs Frog leaps into the pool. The nifty graphics liven things up and the whole thing's pretty spiffy.

Shopkeeper is all about working out how much things cost, whether you've got the right money and what the change should be. Freddy starts out going down the shops and ends up as the manager of a supermarket. Verdict? Okay, if a little static.

In Log Cabin Freddy has to build a log cabin before he can have his dinner.

TEN THINGS THEY DON'T TEACH YOU AT SCHOOL

- How to be a millionaire pop star.
- Advanced cheese and onion crisp appreciation.
- What to tell your mum when she catches behind the bikeshed with Susie Barnes.
- How to eat three shredded wheat.
- How to pat your head and rub your stomach at the same time.
- Where to buy peanut butter, candyfloss and banana milkshake-flavoured toast toppers.
- Who won the FA cup in 1962.
- How to stop all the little scaley bits from the kettle getting into your tea when you don't have a tea-strainer.
- How Extreme manage to make such crap records.
- Why Spiderman's face goes absolutely smooth when he puts his mask on.

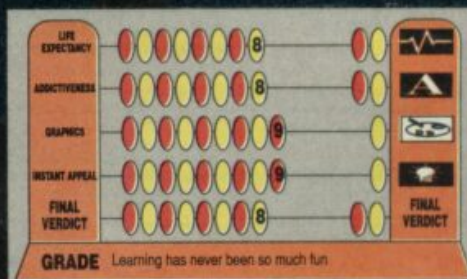

There's a few multiple choice maths problems that you have to answer correctly to get a log. Freddy picks up the log and, like a champion caber tosser, hurls it into position.

Basketball has you filling in the gaps in a series of number or letters. You know the sort of thing - A, B, C, ?, E. Get it right and Freddy throws a ball through a basket ball hoop. The animation is spiffy, but it's all a bit slow.

Library is just a case of putting books in alphabetical order. Nice graphical presentation but the actual game is about as exciting as counting how many time the letter z crops up in the end credits of Neighbours.

Again, the manual is presented in the form of a story and the idea just about comes off. Despite some irritating giggles, this disk still beats Play Bus anyday. ☺

Dizzy

(Back in the studio):

First to see you tonight is that game which spurned a thousand (divided by 200) follow-ups. It was the first arcade adventure to create that unique CodeMasters' feel and was well worthy of its rave reviews. But I'm afraid to say that since then it has been greatly surpassed in graphic, sound and playability departments. It's a shame we couldn't have had one of its follow-ups with us this evening instead. 59°

Slightly Magic

Do you recognise these quotes? "Better than the Dizzy games", "Probably due to the addition of spells as well as objects; you have to think quite a lot more about what to do, rather than simply using the correct object in the correct place", "And the graphics and presentation are excellent too", "In fact, all in all, Slightly Magic is, well, absolutely 'magic'

More of the same from the Lionel Blair of Speccydom, as Strider leaps, springs and somersaults his way through five alien-packed levels. There's a bit of colour, snazzy graphics, which is easy on our brains could be what we're looking for here. Sort of like a scrolling Rick Dangerous. And maybe with a few elephant references. In fact, I don't think that I'd even mind if it had atrocious scrolling, blurry graphics and a crap two player mode. Hmmm. 84°

Unfortunately Bernard Manning wasn't able to be with us tonight, so he made this video earlier.

And that's the end of the show, and the end of my crap review which wasn't even funny. A spanking arcade-adventure with tasty graphics, this was covered as a re-release in issue 71. I wrote the review then and I can't be bothered to say it all agin. I still like it a lot, in fact, I've got onto level three since, so I'll give it an extra degree! 80°

SWITCHBLADE

Gremlin/£3.99 cass

Aha! I've been waiting for this to appear on budget. The last time we saw Switchblade, it was in issue 63. Andy Ide (that old hippy, remember?) gave it a Megagame and 92°. And it well deserved it.

Marky Mark is currently appearing as Widow Twanky in King Lear at the Playhouse.

because as he half-inched it, Havoc managed to bust it into 16 pieces. Silly fool.

So you wander along the surface of this weird planet until you come to a mineshaft. Drop down and you're into the realm of the Switchblade.

Instead of the usual fighting techniques, Switchblade forces you to learn a whole new system. You've got a power meter which, if you hold down the fire button, winds up to full strength. When you release the button, Hiro kicks out with all his might. Aliens, stoneware bottles and even some sections of wall will fall apart when this happens. This method of doing violence takes a wee bit of getting used to, but once you've mastered it, Robert is your father's brother.

As you chug along, each section of the labyrinth reveals itself out of the darkness bit by bit. It's a clever little device, and makes Switchblade dead atmospheric. You're never quite sure what will be round the next corner. It could be a secret cavern, it could be a massive alien or it could be Jeremy Beadle in a stupid disguise, trying not to snigger.

But, we have to ask ourselves at some point on our long quest-like journey, what makes Switchblade a spectacular and entertaining game? Why do I enjoy playing it so much? Can we define this so-called quantity of 'playability' in spatially aware terms?

The answer is, er, yes and no. Probably. Switchblade is a most excellent game because it's tough but not too tough, it's fast and smooth, it's got loads and loads of rooms and it's dead satisfying to explore. I mean you wouldn't believe the number of Switchblade maps we've been sent by you lot. It just goes to show, doesn't it?

Finding the bits of your sword will keep you glued to your screen for ages, mind. This is one big game. How they managed to cram it into only one Speccy will forever remain a mystery, unless the programmers decide to tell us. There are plenty of dead ends, loops and false corners, so prepare to be frustrated as well.

If you're into high-quality platform games, you'll probably be the proud owner of Switchblade already. If you haven't got it, the best thing to do would be to rush out to your local bakery, go into the cooling room and check underneath all the freshly-made baps for a copy of the game. Also, while you're there, could you pick up a French stick for the Shed?

Yep. Switchblade was a Megagame before and it's a Megagame again. Three loud cheers for it! James

The idea of the game is to explore a load of underground passages and chambers, populated by baddies, traps and various other sorts of unpleasantness.

You play a little character called Hiro, who happens to be in the special Switchblade gang. Everything was going brilliantly until a dude called Havoc wandered along and nicked your sacred Fireblade thingy. Fed up, you decide to go and get it back. Or rather get all the bits of it back,

MAKE YOUR OWN SWITCHBLADE

1. Using an industrial laser beam, carefully etch out the shape of the blade you've chosen into some high quality Swedish steel.
2. Set up a metal-cutting lathe (you'll find one at the Ford factory in Dagenham).
3. Carefully cut round the etch-line you made with the laser. If you make a mistake now, you'll have to do it all again.
4. Smooth the blade with a sand-blaster, and gently lathe the sides into razor-sharp cutting edges.
5. Fashion a handle out of finest Madagascan ebony, edge it with gold leaf and - hey presto! A Switchblade fit for presentation to the Royal Family!

The Hi Tec Hanna-Barbera Cartoon Character Collection

Hi Tec/£9.99 cass

ComPilation

I was jolly pleased when I received this compilation as I'm a big fan of the original Hanna-Barbera television cartoons, even though they did give today's companies an excuse to have shows consisting of people standing around blinking. In fact, I'm really looking forward to the review! They do say there's a first time for everything. (You're fired. Ed)

Simon Le Bon, relaxing on his yacht with two Pandas he liberated from Chester Zoo yesterday. He later returned them unharmed.

Top Cat

Did you know that the BBC still insists on calling this show Boss Cat even though the makers of Top Cat cat food have gone bust, or changed their name to Garfield Munchies, or something? Fascinating, eh? Ah well, onto the game itself. The plot is actually rather interesting, with wily old TC offering Benny the Ball to a millionaire as his missing heir, unaware that the scheming butler and his smirking dog have their eyes on the legacy as well. Seizing both their chance and Benny, the two spirit him away to a place of ingenious concealment in an effort to thwart TC's plan. Rightly indignant, and pausing only to round up the rest of his gang (Choo Choo, Spook, Fancy, Brain, Spam, Sleepy, Doc, Rik, Vyryan and Spam), this Bilko of the back-alley dustbins sets out to save the day. Graphics throughout are spot on, the characters are instantly recognisable, the backgrounds smartly coloured, and TC himself doesn't walk, he strolls. Nonchalantly.

The game though is something else. It's a flip-screen collect-'em-up affair, with keys to grab and nasties to dodge, and it has all the playability and addictive qualities of the embarrassingly similar Yogi Bear And Friends In The Greed Monster. In short, the kind of game you could forget to load and not even notice.

Hong Kong Phooey

The pooch who does for kung fu what Jacques Clousseau did for Karate, Hong Kong Phooey battles crime with a steely heart and a stony head. In the game, a particularly ridiculous baddy has escaped from prison, and our hero has been called in to fetch him back. No doubt you'll be delighted to learn this isn't a maze game; it's a scrolling beat-'em-up with overtones of Robocop, as well-drawn sprites knock each other off walkways. The trouble is, there's no variety to the gameplay, and while the playing area is commendably large, the difficulty level is much too high. Henchmen and spike traps are everywhere, with each mistake costing you whopping chunks of energy. A pity, as it means the initial playability is quickly beaten down by frustration. Aw, Phooey. 41°

Yogi's Great Escape

John is shocked at the mysterious disappearance of his submarine. He later realised he'd left the keys in it.

From the cartoon co-starring Boo Boo and Donald Pleasance, this game charts the adventures of the brainy bruin after he discovers Jellystone Park is to close. Deciding to have it away on his toes rather than be banged up in a zoo, Yogi stuffs his faithful compatriot into a picnic basket and dashes off through six levels of magnificent countryside. Dogging his heels are dogs (natch), hunters,

- Officer Dibble

Laurence Whelk gives a reading of his latest poem, Twisting My Moonlit Pony before a collection of war criminals at Barnsley Town Hall, famous for its fluted archways and mock-Tudor security video cameras

Ranger Smith and Richard Gibson as the hilarious German officer. (Now you're just being silly. Ed). A dandy little scrolling platform game, Yogi's Great Escape is full of moving ledges, optimistic leaps into thin air and hidden bonuses. It's a Brucie! (You know, "good game, good game" ... oh, never mind.) 70°

Ruff And Reddy

Famous as both Hanna-Barbera's first foray into TV animation and as one of the few cartoon double-acts who were pals, Ruff and Reddy have now all but vanished from memory. What a shame. In the game, with a plot taken from their very first show (I think), you play Ruff (an orange kitten with a bow-tie) who's managed to crash-land the space rocket both you and Reddy (a big white dog) have stowed away upon. A group of aliens are holding onto Reddy until you save some of their number who have been kidnapped by another bunch of extra-terrestrials. (Crikey, no wonder people don't remember these cartoons.) What it all boils down to is a platform game suspiciously like Yogi's Great Escape in style, with more than a hint of Top Cat in the graphics (Ruff ambles along in exactly the same way as TC). Unlike Yogi however, this is decidedly average, not terribly exciting and with confusing flip-screen presentation. Rough and weedy. 40°

None of the game have any of the cartoons' atmosphere, Yogi's Great Escape is good fun but has virtually nothing to do with the character himself. They fail miserably in recognising the potential of the licences; the 1960s Hanna-Barbera cartoons may have had limited animation, but they were hammed with gags and ideas. This compilation is just the opposite; the graphics are uniformly excellent, but there's no attempt to be innovative and, for the most part, no content to the games. Insultingly poor. Jon

Close examination shows the soil structure to consist of broken down Nintendo games, some still unused.

Right you lot. Everyday we get sacks of letters from Speccy fans who'd like nothing better than to work for Your Sinclair, the best Speccy magazine in the known universe. Well now's your chance. We're on the look-out for a gifted writer to join the YS team. Ideally you should have:

MURRAY MOUSE IN MOUSE MANIA

CodeMasters

CodeMasters shockingly call this game 'cheesetastic'. Using such language is enough to put you off cheese (and CodeMasters) for life. But don't worry, it's just their idea of being clever and having fun.

Anyway, Murray Mouse, a newcomer to the cute-cartoon-style-characters-with-humorous-names stable, has discovered that ten members of the evil Moufia organisation have formed a conspiracy to fly to the moon, which they've discovered is made of green cheese. They then intend to claim the moon for themselves.

Murray, not wanting the world to be held to ransom, sets off on a large and pretty difficult task. He's got to find each of the Moufia members and bring them to justice. That they may not want to be brought to justice doesn't enter into his tiny, rodent head.

Murray Mouse is a flip-screen arcade adventure, with more platforms than Waterloo station. (We did that gag last month. Ed) It all starts above ground, where some chaps called the Joking

Mushrooms live. Murray gets away from all this by going underground to the sewers and mouse houses which he finds below the mushrooms. Weirdness indeed.

Murray, being just a mere mouse, isn't really expected to save the entire world without any help. Luckily there are loads of collectables scattered around to make life a tad easier for him.

He's got big hands for a mouse and can hold up to three things at once, which is useful cos some of the objects hold the key to getting further into it all (if you see what I mean).

Yes, it looks like CodeMasters have combined their usual format of wandering from screen to screen doing stuff with mice and, er, cheese. Hurrah!

How to make cheese.

- Get a load of milk (about half a pint should do).
- Put it in a big jar with a tablespoon of live yoghurt.
- Open the jar, sneeze into it, then quickly close it again.
- Leave it for 6 months.
- Forget about it and move house.
- Get a phone call from the Ministry Of Defence, who've cordoned off your old house, believing it to be a biological test site left by the Russians in World War 2.
- The cheese is now ready to serve.

Murray isn't finding it pleasant in the sewers. What he really needs is a good sit-down and a nice slice of Wensleydale Old Veiny. Delicious!

WORLD CUP

D&H GAMES

Just when you thought you wouldn't have to worry about England playing football against anybody else in the world, D & H have come bouncing back with World Cup.

I reckon it must be at least two years until the next world cup, and two years since the last one. So basically we couldn't be further from any world cup. Good timing, D & H!

Right, let's forget any nonsense about real world cups and concentrate on this game. Are you concentrating? Good. Well for once here's a game which actually uses the proper names of the England players. For example there's Lineker, Bull, Gascoigne and Shilton (and those are just the defenders).

What you do in the game has been described pretty accurately in many a review of management game, but let's have a brief recap, shall we?

You've got about fifteen bods in your squad. Obviously only eleven of them are going to be running out of the tunnel on the day, but what with injuries, strikes, drunkenness and people staying in their locker rooms and deciding not to play, you might need the back-up of the other four.

How to get yourself onto a football team.

- Get your parents to buy one, appoint your dad as manager and ask him to hire you for a huge fee.
- Call yourself Bryan Robson. You never need to actually play, then. You can just be injured the whole time.
- Become really fat, stick your tongue out a lot and speak in a Geordie accent.
- Turn up at a match dressed in one team's kit then, when no-one's looking, run on, smack a player (with the same kit on as you) and take his place.
- Train hard and get noticed by a scout. Then practise until you're good enough.

You also get the chance to train, select position and tactical patterns. As you're doing this, the weeks roll by and the qualifying matches start for the world cup.

But the greatest thing about World Cup is the graphics. You actually get a grandstand view of all the matches. You simply sit back and watch both the action on the screen and a commentary telling you which of the little characters is which.

World Cup looks like it could be the future of management sims. There's all the team training, morale and selection stuff to go through, but there's also the nail-biting, nerve-chewing, hair-wrenching bit. You'll know exactly how those managers feels as they sit on the sidelines unable to do anything but shout loudly and occasionally pick their noses.

Watch out for the full review next issue.

The crowd is going wild here in Austria. He's on his feet, and he's, er, leaving by the back gate. Oh well, I'm excited by it.
