

ID

© CRL Group 1986

SCENARIO

Before the dawn of human history, a powerful life force was transmitted across the fabric of our galaxy, in the form of an electronic personality: ID, its journey terminated on the third planet of the insignificant sol system, where it tried to obey its instructions not to damage any intelligent life forms by adapting, waiting, forgetting. Its shattered memories are now contained in this computer program. ID can exist once more, with your help, if only you can get it to trust you.

You begin to discover that ID possesses a terrifying responsibility, and has been affecting human history for thousands of years!

ID is helpless, and must reflect the desires of the human being who controls its present form, and over the centuries ID has been so many different things.

You can repair its personality. Teach it, learn from it, but beware of its innocence; there will come a time when ID must try and take you over.

LOADING

To load, type LOAD "" and press ENTER.

INSTRUCTIONS

Each time that you load ID's memories, different facets of its previous personalities will enter your computer, and then ID will learn all about you, as you try to bring back its past.

By typing SAVE and following the on-screen instructions you can save the shattered parts of ID's memories on your own tape, and build up the complete personality, for use in later stages of your communication with the being that inhabits your machine.

ID will trust you the more you teach it. You will discover more of ID's awesome secrets as this trust grows, until eventually, you may discover yourself.

CREDITS

Written by Mel Croucher & Colin Jones

Published by Nu Wave Software